Graf Zeppelin Swings Over Atlantic On Return Trip

GREAT CIRCLE ROUTE TAKEN BY HUGE SHIP

PASSES CAPE COD

"Making Fast Trip" Last Word from Germany-Bound Craft

By International News Service

With a tail wind at her back and sunshine glinting on her silver sides the giant, pug-nosed air liner Graf Zeppelin was beating up the Atlantic coast today on her return voyage of 4,000 miles to Germany.

Bearing 24 passengers and a crew of 40 the mighty dirigible departed from her temporary home at Lakehurst N J at 1 54 30 o'clock this morning soared over New York City with all five motors pounding at 3 15 and at 6 25 o'clock flew over the tip of Cape Cod on the Massachusetts coast.

When the airship passed Cape Cod she was bearing north by northeast in the general condition of Halifax and traveling at a speed of better than 60 miles an hour.

On Lindbergh Route.

Thirteen minutes after the Zeppelin passed Cape Cod the radio marine station at Chatham Mass intercepted a wireless from the ship saying it would follow the "Newfoundland route over Groessten." This indicated it would follow the great circle or the north Atlantic steamer lane, the same route taken by Col Charles A Lindbergh on his flight from New York to Paris.

A fishing trawler 100 miles off Cape Cod sighted the dirigible at 7 16 and reported her position to the [illegible]

Then a few minutes before 8 o'clock came a message from the Graf Zeppelin that she was making a fast trip.

Eckener was steering over open sea after passing above Cape Cod. His course as indicated by his progress from New York to Chatham will lead him south of Nova Scotia and the Zeppelin passengers may not sight land again on this side of the Atlantic.

ZEPPELIN SEEN BY "NIGHT BIRDS"

New York, Oct 29—The Graf Zeppelin passed over New York City at 3 10 A M, today on its return trip from Lakehurst N J to Friedrichshafen, Germany. It was flying low.

Silhouetted against a starlight sky, the mistress of the air was a beautiful sight in the full moon. Her cabin lights were blazing full and lights in the four small gondolas underneath were twinkling.

The Zeppelin circled over the city for a few minutes to give the "night birds" on Broadway a treat and then headed northeast. Night workers in office buildings leaned from windows and craned necks for a parting glimpse of the huge air liner.

Can a girl play a double game?

DAPHNE

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON
Author of "The Secret Studio"

In this intensely interesting serial the author has vividly described the love of two girls—step-sisters—for the same man. The gripping drama of their struggle and the vivid description of the utterly different ways by which these girls tried to win him make this the most thrilling romance you have read this year.

AT WHITE HOUSE

Our Mary was in Washington to talk over with tax officials a little matter of some $200,000 which a few old meanies decided she owed the government, but she wound up that business in short order and hied herself to the White House for luncheon. Yes, Doug was there too.

HOSPITAL BOARD TO MEET NOV. 7

Women's Auxiliary Will Hear Institution's Needs Outlined by Superintendent

Following the organization last week of the Women's Board of the Marion City hospital Mrs. John Gardner, president, today announced that the organization would next meet with Mrs. J. F. Longshore East Church st, Wednesday, Nov 7. Miss Geraldine Hord will be assistant hostess.

The board has been organized to promote activities toward making City hospital a larger and more efficient institution according to board members and Mrs Gardner today stated that Miss Louise Williams hospital superintendent had arranged to meet with the board on Nov 7 and outline the hospital's needs so that the new organization could proceed with its program of work.

The new hospital board is composed of a large number of prominent Marion women.

ADDITIONAL MILLION IS GIVEN TO SCHOOL

Rockefeller Makes Second Donation to University of Chicago

Chicago Oct 29—With a brand new $2,000,000 chapel the gift of John D Rockefeller University of Chicago officials today found themselves with an additional $1,000,000 to invest in religion.

The latest gift of $1,000,000 was announced yesterday at the dedication of the new chapel by John D Rockefeller Jr, who attended as the representative of his father.

The third million will be known as the Laura Spelman Rockefeller memorial fund Mr Rockefeller said.

It is to be used to promote the religious idealism of the students at the university and of all those who come within the gates through the broadest and most liberal development of the spiritual forces centering in and radiating from this chapel," he explained.

MAN KILLS 2 CHILDREN AND THEN SHOOTS SELF

High Point, N C, Oct 29—Police today said they had been unable to discover any motive for the killing of J W Hinkle hosiery mill official, of his two children and then himself. Returning home from the mill in Saturday afternoon, Hinkle took the children, Elizabeth, seven years old and Virgil, 10 years old, for an automobile ride shot them to death and then ended his own life.

HALF SESSIONS IN SIGHT FOR SCHOOLS HERE

Division of Daily Classes Certain Unless More Rooms Are Provided

ALL SPACE IN USE

No Quarters Available for Future Increase in Enrollment

Editor's Note: How would you like to have your children attending school only half a day? Do you believe half day attendance would be beneficial to them? Parents are faced with such a situation because of the crowded conditions in the schools. Basement rooms halls and offices are being used now. What to do with the 250 additional pupils that are expected next year is the school board's greatest concern. Success of the school bond issue one week from Tuesday will insure livable conditions for our children. The Star believes in this bond issue and urges that readers completely digest this series of articles on school conditions.

Should Marion continue a few more years without providing additional school building facilities half day sessions will become the only means of providing class room space for the steadily increasing enrollment of pupils.

This is not guess work. It is an inescapable certainty based upon knowledge of the fact that all of the present buildings are now filled, many of them greatly overtaxed and that attendance is growing larger year after year.

Just how long the school management can improvise seating arrangements to hold off the half day session plan is a matter of conjecture. There is probability however that the half-day method would become imperative for at least a part of the city within two years.

This would mean a lowering of the standard of Marion schools making it difficult for boys and girls of the community to continue their educations in higher institutions of learning and consequently placing them at a serious disadvantage in the battle for success in life. And a battle it

F. E. COON ENDS LIFE BY HANGING

Widely-Known Farmer Found Dead in Shed Near Home

Frank E Coon 63 widely known farmer residing on the Upper Sandusky pike about three and a half miles north of Marion committed suicide by hanging himself with a rope in an unused shed on his farm between 10 and 12 o'clock today. He was found by workmen in his employ.

Despondency over financial difficulties and poor health is believed to be the reason for Coon's self destruction. Stomach trouble of a peculiarly painful nature had been troubling Coon for some time.

He left no farewell message as far as is known to his associates.

When Coon failed to come to lunch at noon today, his farm hands went out to look about the farm for him believing that he might have an apoplectic stroke. They found him in an unused shed about a half a mile from his home hanging from a rafter. The rope was bound twice around the rafter.

Climbing up onto a low work bench built against one of the walls of the shed Coon jumped off.

County Coroner B D Osborn pronounced the case as being death from strangulation, the fall being to short to break Coon's neck.

Three workmen on the farm found Coon's body. They are J B Gleason, Herschel Withers, and George Bowman.

Climax in Local Campaign Reached in Two Meetings Saturday

COOPER SPEAKS

Pledges Sound Business Administration in Talk to Audience of 1,000

With the major part of the 1928 political campaign behind them, Republican leaders here are preparing for the last lap of the race.

The Republican campaign reached its climax here Saturday with the rally in The Star auditorium at night and the women's meeting and luncheon in the Hotel Harding in the afternoon. Candidates for United States senator, governor, congress, state senate, judge of the appellate court and one national and one state committeewoman carried the battle for votes to Marion county voters in the two meetings.

Before an audience of nearly 1,000 in the Star auditorium, Myers Y. Cooper Republican gubernatorial candidate made his first appearance in Marion county this fall. He shared the Saturday night program with Grant E Mouser Jr candidate for congress, Robert L. Rohr, candidate for state senator Charles A Guernsey, candidate for judge of the district court of appeals, and Mrs Walum Sinclair LeVan national committeewoman for Ohio and vice chairman of the Ohio Council of Republican women.

In his address Cooper made a plea for better business in state government.

The Republican party "he said" is pledged to a balanced budget so that state expenditures shall not exceed appropriations and that appropriations shall not exceed the anticipated revenues of the state. Ohio is one of the few states that has found it necessary to levy a direct tax of six tenths of a mill on the taxpayers of the state. The time has come when we must put an end to invention of new methods for extracting added taxes from the pockets of the tax payer."

Cooper declared his intention if elected governor to appoint as head of the state department of agriculture a real dirt farmer who knows from practical experience the needs of the farmers of Ohio and who by instinct as well as by training will regard their problems as his own. He

EVERETT KOON GRANTED STAY OF EXECUTION

Hearing on Appeal for Condemned Man Set for Nov 26

COURT FIXES DATE

Gives Slayer New Lease on Life; Originally Sentenced to Die Nov. 5

The shadow of death which was scheduled to descend upon Everett Koon alias Cecil Dunn one week from today, has been lifted at least temporarily.

Koon has been granted a stay of execution. He was given at least a short lease of life this morning when the district court of appeals at Lima met to hear a motion for reprieve which was filed last week by Homer J Johnson attorney for the condemned man.

Hearing on Appeal Set

Johnson filed the motion for stay of execution several days after filing a petition in error with the court at Lima. When the three judges met this morning, Nov 26 was set as the date for hearing the appeal.

In the meantime Koon will be held in death row at the Ohio penitentiary, where he has been confined since the middle of last June. Koon was taken to the penitentiary by Sheriff James A Deal shortly after he was convicted in common pleas court of the murder of Henry Poos 73 a farmer living northeast of Marion.

Death Sentence Mandatory

A jury of 12 men found Koon guilty of murder in the first degree while committing a robbery. The death sentence was mandatory as there was no recommendation from the jury for mercy.

After hearing the case for three days the jury returned a verdict on Wednesday, June 13. On the following Saturday Koon was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the Ohio penitentiary on Nov 5.

ESCAPED CONVICT SURRENDERS HERE

Man Missing Since State Prison Fire Gives Self Up to Marion Police

Frank Reybuck, 28, of Toledo, the first of five missing prisoners who are believed to have escaped when 45 of their companions perished in a fire at the Junction City O, prison brick plant on Oct 5, came into police headquarters here last night and gave himself up.

Entering with the intention of finding a place to sleep for the night Reybuck decided that he had been a fugitive long enough and might as well return to serve out his maximum sentence of 14 months and come out a free man.

Taken Back by Guard

A guard from the state penitentiary at Columbus arrived here at noon today and took Reybuck back to finish his term.

"The deputy warden had given orders that no prisoners were to be let out even if fire broke out" Reybuck told a representative of The Star today "and when it did we were trapped in that old ramshackle frame building and many couldn't get out.

"The fire started some time during the night. We woke up when some one ran through hollering 'Get your pants on. The place is on fire.' Everybody came running out and headed for the doors but they were locked.

Tells of Escape

"The guards had been ordered not to open them without direct orders from the deputy warden, who lived in town three miles away, so some of us started to break the door down. Others got through the windows some

Police Search For Bomber of Mansfield Publisher's Home; Family Not Injured

Blast Wrecks Porch and Interior of House, Investigators Unable To Ascribe Motive for Outrage and Unearth No Clues in Case

Mansfield Oct 29—A fine comb dragnet was out today seeking to find the perpetrator of the bomb outrage which occurred here early today when the suburban home of R C Hoiles Mansfield publisher, was partially wrecked by an infernal machine. It was set in the front porch of the Hoiles home or hurled by a time fuse.

Fortunately no one was injured, although the front porch was torn away and the interior of the home badly damaged.

Mr Hoiles his wife, their two small children and a maid were asleep in the home when they were rudely awakened by the detonation of the bomb.

Police were unable to ascribe a motive for the outrage. No threatening missives had been received by the publisher and he had no known enemies.

A dearth of clues confronted investigators, their only definite lead being a report by a woman neighbor of the Hoiles that she had seen an automobile driving away from the vicinity of the house at about the time the blast let go.

Besides the Mansfield News, Hoiles is publisher of the Lorain Times Herald and the Bucyrus Telegraph Forum.

C H Hoiles son of the publisher is at present on a wedding trip.

SIX KILLED

Pennsylvania Train Crashes Into Car at Crossing

Johnstown, Pa, Oct 29—Six persons five of them members of one family, were killed when their automobile was demolished by a Pennsylvania railroad passenger train at Seward, near the Cambria Westmoreland county line early today. Five of the victims were killed outright and the sixth died a short time after being admitted to the Memorial hospital here.

The dead are George Zaborchak, his wife, Anna; their two minor children and Mrs Zaborchak's mother, Mrs Andrew Homola, and Joseph Tatik, driver of the machine. Tatik was still living when picked up by a passing motorist who rushed him on to Johnstown. He had suffered fractures of both legs and arms, a fractured skull and internal injuries.

INJURED WOMEN CARED FOR HERE

Two Hurt in Accident Near Caledonia Taken to Williamson Home

Mrs R D Williamson, of DeGraff, and her sister, Miss Grace Huston, of Bellefontaine, who were injured Saturday morning in an automobile accident which resulted in the death of their sister, Miss Nell Huston, are at the home of Mrs Williamson's son, R. C. Williamson, on Carner av.

They were taken to the son's home after receiving attention in the office of a physician in Caledonia. Mrs. Williamson is suffering from cuts and bruises and Miss Grace Huston has a broken collar bone. Mrs Susan Huston, of Bellefontaine, another sister who was driving the car, suffered only slight injuries. She returned to her home in Bellefontaine.

The accident occurred when the car skidded from the road a short distance west of Caledonia while the four sisters were enroute to Wooster for a visit.

Funeral services for Miss Nell Huston, who was 60 years of age and principal of the Central Junior high school at Bellefontaine, will be held at her home in Bellefontaine at 2 30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Burial in Bellefontaine cemetery will follow. Her body was taken to Bellefontaine Saturday night from the Tieson undertaking parlors in Caledonia, where it was removed following the accident.

All of the sisters were well known in Marion and vicinity.

11-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLED WHILE CLEANING RIFLE

Hamilton, Oct. 29—Edward Lakes, 11, was instantly killed today when the gun he was cleaning, against the advice of his father exploded forcing a ramrod through his body near the heart.

The lad, believing the gun unloaded, disregarded his father's warning took the gun into the cellar of his home and was cleaning and oiling it when it was discharged.

Miss Marie Harper, Former Marion Teacher, Preparing to Be Aerial Pilot

ONE girl is among the nine persons from here, who aspire to become airplane pilots. She is Miss Marie Harper, 461 Davids st, a former teacher in Marion schools.

Miss Harper was among nine who took the pilots examination yesterday. The examination was made by Dr M I. Gorey, of Columbus, medical examiner for the state department of commerce. All nine passed the examination, it was reported this morning.

The nine examined are either prospective students or are already receiving lessons from the Central Air Transport of Columbus whose planes come here every Sunday for instructing students.

The new municipal airport was the scene of considerable activity yesterday. In spite of the chilly weather there were approximately 200 persons at the field for the greater part of the day.

The very latest in airplane color schemes was shown at the field by two new planes yesterday.

A Simplex Red Arrow finished in creme color with blue trimmings was flown here from Defiance by Frank Dorbritt, a representative of the factory. The ship was a monoplane.

There were also two American Eagle biplanes here. One was new, with a color scheme of canary yellow and navy blue.

Although there are no hangar or gasoline facilities at the field, aviators who have landed here recently have expressed satisfaction with the location of the field. All, however, point out the disadvantage of not being able to conveniently refuel their motors or find storage for their planes over night.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce has notified the Rand McNally Co. of the location and specifications of the local airport. It will appear on maps published by the company in the future. The United States department of commerce has also been notified of the field and information concerning it will appear in airport literature published by the department.

FATAL BURNS SUSTAINED AT CASS AV. HOME

Mrs. Lucinda Houser Passes Away at City Hospital

MISTAKE IS CAUSE

Uses Naphtha Instead of Coal Oil To Start Fire In Stove

Burns sustained in an explosion early yesterday morning when she attempted to kindle a fire with naphtha, which she had mistaken for coal oil, caused the death of Mrs. Lucinda Houser 54, wife of William Houser, at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at City hospital.

The explosion occurred in the dining room of the Houser home, 208 Cass av. at 5 30 a. m., when Mrs. Houser threw naphtha into a parlor heating stove to start a fire. In the early morning darkness she had mistaken a can of naphtha for the can of coal oil which she had been using each morning.

Mrs. Houser's entire body was burned, particularly in the upper portion.

Her husband, William Houser, was at work at the Marion Steam Shovel Co. when the accident happened. Other members of the family had not arisen.

Son Attempts Rescue

Hearing her screams, a son, Oscar Houser, rushed to her aid. After throwing an overcoat about her he left the room to find additional materials to extinguish the flames and she ran out of the room and onto the rear porch.

John Boyer, a neighbor, completely extinguished the flames with a jacket. Fire departments 2 and 3 were called.

The wall and ceiling paper and window curtains of the room in which the explosion occurred, were also burned. Damage was estimated at about $20.

The body, removed to the C. E. Curtis & Co undertaking parlors, may be viewed at the Houser home, after 10 a. m. Tuesday. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at the home and at 1 o'clock at Lee Street Presbyterian church. The Rev. James M. Fisher, pastor, will officiate and burial will be in the Patterson cemetery, 11 miles north of Kenton.

Mrs. Houser was born in Hancock county, Oct 10, 1871, the daughter of John and Mary Haycox, both of whom preceded her in death. She was married to William Houser at Forest, July 28, [illegible]. She was a member of the Baptist church of Mt Blanchard valley.

Surviving her with Mr. Houser are two daughters, Mrs. Mildred Carwile, 284 Chestnut st., Miss Margaret Houser, at home, three sons, Lee Houser, Bennett st., and Oscar and Ernest Houser, at home, two sisters, Mrs. Ernest Schertzer, 119 Columbia st., and Mrs. Fred Johnson, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and two brothers, L. A. Haycox, 357 Pokey st., and Alfred Haycox, North Grand av.

FINAL PLEAS BEING MADE BEFORE JURY

Cicco Case Will Be Decided in Court Late Today

Elyria, Oct. 29—The fate of Louis Cicco, former Lorain dry raider, on trial in Judge A. R. Webber's court on a charge of shooting with intent to wound, is expected to be in the hands of the jury of six men and six women this afternoon. Final pleas to the jury were begun immediately after court opened this morning.

Cicco has admitted that he fired several shots after a car in which Miss Betty Heywood, 22, of Elyria, was a passenger had failed to stop at the command of himself and two fellow officers. One of the bullets struck Miss Heywood at the back of her head.

Cicco and his fellow officers said they had been "tipped" that a booze laden automobile of the type similar to that in which Miss Heywood was riding was coming into Lorain the night of Sept. 20 when the shooting occurred. Cicco says he fired at the road behind the automobile and the defense contends that the bullet which struck Miss Heywood ricocheted from the pavement. The state has sought to prove that the accused man shot directly at the car, with the intent to wound its occupants.

It is generally believed here that the jury will reach a quick verdict, possibly late today.

PRISONERS ESCAPE

London, Oct 29—Two "honor" prisoners who took french leave from the state prison farm yesterday, were being sought by state authorities today. They are, Tinler Markle, 36, Stark county, and Delbert Wright, 28, of Newark.

G. O. P. Drive To Elect Herbert Hoover Enters Final Week

NAMED OFFICER

Youth Chosen Vice President of O. S. U. Society

O. Oct 29—Charles W. Pucyrus was named vice of the Student Branch of can Society of Civil Engineers at a business meeting held at Ohio State University, Friday.

Allen is enrolled as a senior in the College of Engineering at Ohio State. He was named a member of the society last year. He is a member of the Triangle fraternity, an organization composed entirely of engineering students.

USES PLEASANT WAY TO END STUFFY COLD

Many Here Who Try Hospital Method in Own Homes Get Almost Instant Relief

Instead of enduring the needless and pneumonia risk which results from neglecting colds, of Marion people are getting head and chest colds in a few by a hospital method which doctors now recommending for home use.

Pleasant experience of O. H. is typical. For three days the remedies he used failed to a cold which began in his head. He consulted his doctor who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Pectoral—a medication of wild cherry hydrate, etc., which is used in extreme hospital case. Relief began almost instantly, the reports. By night congestion was clearing up rapidly and the "achy" feeling was gone. He continued the treatment as his doctor directed and in a day or so the cold was entirely gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician. This hospital certified medicine quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps get rid of congestion, reduce fever and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Pectoral now and you too will feel like a different person tomorrow. At all druggists—60c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

NOMINEE TO LEAVE ON TOUR THURSDAY

Prepared Addresses Planned for St. Louis and Pueblo, Colo.

TO MAKE MANY STOPS

Allen Fires Broadside at John J Raskob, Smith's Manager

BY WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
Marion Star Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 29—The Republican drive to put Herbert Hoover in the White House entered its final week today with high party leaders launching a climactic effort to keep organized labor and the independent agricultural vote in the Republican column.

Hoover, as the standard bearer, will direct his efforts this week to winning the border states and to keeping the Republican mountain states safely in the fold. Hoover will leave here Thursday to speed westward through Maryland, West Virginia, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois and Missouri. He will make a rear platform appearance in Cumberland, Md., late that day, others in Louisville, Ky., Mt. Vernon, Washington and Vincennes, Ind., and Salem, Ill. Friday and a prepared address in St. Louis Friday night.

The nominee then will cross Kansas into Colorado with many stops enroute and a lengthy one at Pueblo, after which he will continue through Utah and Nevada to his home in Palo Alto, Calif., to vote in Tuesday's election. Hoover will speak in the public square at Pueblo on the night of Nov. 1. Pueblo is the home of the Republican national chairman, Dr. Hubert Work. His schedule incidentally, will permit him to make brief stops in Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah. On the last lap he will make several stops in California.

Will Advise Hoover

Hoover meanwhile found his board of advisers increased by the return here of Thomas Gregory, San Francisco capitalist, and George Barr Baker, New York journalist, both of whom will accompany him to the coast. Gregory and Baker have been Hoover's personal friends for many years and the nominee probably will rely upon their advice in the closing hours of the campaign.

The drive for farm votes was made by the Republican national committee in a statement detailing how the Republican administration had built federal roads in the last eight years. The committee pointed out that the rural vote would be much larger this year than in other presidential campaigns due to the good roads.

The committee declared the Harding-Coolidge administrations had spent $7,000,000,000 on good roads since 1920 while prior to that year the government had spent but $23,000,000. The mileage of federal roads it added was increased from 387,740 to 600,000 miles in the same period.

Allen Hits Raskob

Gov. Henry J. Allen, Republican publicity director, meanwhile fired a broadside at John J. Raskob, Democratic national committee chairman, charging the Democrats with launching a campaign of mud slinger, misrepresentation and fabrication. He cited a statement issued by the St. Louis branch of the Democratic national committee attacking Mr. Hoover's religious faith.

The circular declared no Quaker has ever went to war and Allen cited the fact that two Quaker colleges alone supplied over 250 Quaker commissioned officers to the American army in the recent war. Allen also praised Hoover's service as a member of the war council.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis led the drive for labor votes. He denied Democratic charges that Hoover opposed organized labor at a congressional hearing in 1920. Davis said he had read the record of the hearings and found Hoover's testimony puts him on record as having every sympathy with organized labor and with the principle of collective bargaining.

Working on Speech

If you want the real opinion of organized labor in regard to Herbert Hoover, read the biography of the late Samuel Gompers. Davis added. Mr. Gompers was even stronger in his praise of Mr. Hoover at the close of the unemployment conference called by Mr. Hoover in the dark days of 1921, when wages were low, when our foreign debt was enormous, when business was paralyzed and a former Democratic administration had left us 5,735,000 unemployed.

The nominee avoid all the political fireworks, kept to his headquarters. He expected to complete his St. Louis speech by tomorrow, after which he only efforts will be to confer with party leaders until he leaves for the west.

M. E. EGGER DIES OF TUBERCULOSIS

Passes Away at North State st. Home, Funeral Tuesday

Martin E. Egger, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Egger, died of tuberculosis at 1:10 o'clock yesterday noon at his home, 801 North State st. He had been ill eight months.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at his late home and at 1:30 o'clock at Emmanuel Baptist church. The Rev. S. F. Porter, pastor of the church will officiate and burial will be in the cemetery at Little Sandusky.

Mr. Egger was born at Little Sandusky, Oct. 2, 1906. His parents were Martin and Alice Brewer Egger, his father a native of Marion county and his mother of Little Sandusky. He never married. He was a member of Emmanuel Baptist church and had been employed as a laborer.

Surviving with the parents are three sisters, Mrs. D. J. Good, of Wyandot county and Mrs. J. W. Markin and Miss Marguerite Egger, at home and a brother, Harley Egger of this city.

Marion Slayer One of Birthday Party Guests in Death House at Ohio Prison

SIX men condemned by society to die in the thanatic structure instrument of death dealing justice, the electric chair, stirred towards on their cots in death row of Ohio state penitentiary in Columbus today. One of the number was Everett Koon, sentenced to die for the murder of Henry Loss, aged Marion county farmer.

It was hard to bring themselves to an awakening to the grim realities of guards pacing with measured steps outside of their cells, or to the feeble rays of an autumnal sun timidly striving to pierce the gloom of cold gray walls and iron bars. Like children tumbling out with an occasional unit of refreshments at a birthday party, these six men branded with the mark of Cain found it difficult to emerge from their comfortable drowsiness, for they too had attended a birthday party.

At a long table in the big house Sunday noon sat eight men, six of whom have been condemned to pay the supreme penalty. The other two were a guard and a trusty friend.

Youthful Host

Eyes shining with the excitement of his twenty first and probably last birthday party, John Sabo, the '911 number' from Akron, occupied the post of host at the head of the table. Wearing a brilliant bow tie, the handsome young Hungarian, with the true courtesy helped his guests to generous portions of spring chicken, dressing, sweet potatoes, and right down the line to the coffee and cigars.

At Sabo's right eyes riveted on his plate and sullenly muttering against the intrusion of newspapermen, sat Stanley Hoppe, who will die in the electric chair Friday for the murder of Dorothy Sielagowski, 7 year old Toledo school girl, unless legal intervention is granted.

Everett Koon, a grin on his face, sat at the west end of the table. He is to die a week from today for the murder of Mr. Loss, who was beaten to death with a rock during an attempted burglary at the Loss home north of Marion.

Among Those Present

To Sabo's left sat three negroes—Joseph Weaver, John Rucker and John Bradshaw, all awaiting death. Weaver is charged with the murder of a Cleveland watchman, Bradshaw with the murder of a Columbus woman and Rucker with the murder of Officer John Franken, Cincinnati, during an attempted holdup. Behind them stood Guard Henderson.

In the middle of the table reposed a culinary triumph—a birthday cake "with white icin' and 21 yellow candles"—baked by "Mother" Thomas, wife of the warden, at Sabo's request.

Father O'Brien, Catholic penitentiary chaplain, visited the men before the party, conducted a session of prayer and said grace before they ate.

And they ate heartily and topped it off with lemonade, coffee and cigars. It was late when they went to their cots last night. It was late when they arose today.

The 'kid's' party was still on their minds as they rolled from their blankets, still up most in their thoughts nervously as perhaps for the party marked the end of another dreaded day of waiting, an one day nearer the time when they will turn

TWO KILLED

Man May Recover Despite Broken Back, Pierced Lung

Columbus, O., Oct. 29—Helen Schwebold, 14, and her brother Harold, 15, are dead today and their father, F. P. Schwebold of Xenia, was in a serious condition at University hospital following a collision between the Schwebold car and one driven by Harry Martin, of this city, near New California yesterday.

Although Schwebold's back is broken and his chest pierced by a portion of the running board of the car physicians at the hospital today expressed the belief that the man may live.

Mrs. Schwebold and an infant, also passengers in the car, escaped with slight injuries. The baby was thrown through the windshield by the impact of the two cars.

In Martin's car were Clark Mellon, his daughter Agnes and Fred Speakman, all of Marysville. All escaped with slight injuries.

YOUNG GIRL IN CRITICAL CONDITION AFTER ATTACK

Cincinnati, Oct. 29—Police were searching today for a negro who last night confronted 11 year old Marie Bard as she emerged from a theatre here and forced her to accompany him to a lumber yard and there attacked her according to the girl's story to the police.

The girl is in General hospital here where physicians declared her condition to be critical.

TRACTION CAR TEARS UP STREET N BELLEFONTAINE

Bellefontaine, Oct. 29—Repairs were under way here today on street pavement in the business section and trackage and switches of the Indianapolis, Columbus and Eastern Traction Co., which were badly damaged yesterday when a freight car on the traction line split a switch, swerved from the rails and climbed onto the sidewalk. Traction and automobile traffic was halted for three hours.

GetYourVegetables in Liquid Form!

DOUBTLESS you know there are valuable dietary qualities in vegetables. But not all of us get enough fresh vegetables and the soon tires of a vegetable diet. A very easy way to remedy this is to get a little syrup pepsin. The a spoonful occasionally and you stimulate the inner system. Your keener appetite, and perfect assimilation of whatever you eat will soon show you are on the right track. Your elimination will become more thorough and regular.

It isn't necessary to give up things you like to eat, or eat a lot of other things because you "ought to." The syrup pepsin can establish that perfect balance without dieting. And how pure syrup pepsin tones the stomach, liver and bowels! You'll soon discover you can eat anything. Your chronic recurring constipation spells will disappear. Anybody who will take this simple precaution will go a month after month without need of the powerful purges so frequently needed in the past.

Make a test of this wonderful vegetable product. Dr. Caldwell first used it in 1870. Today, you cannot name a druggist who hasn't this famous prescription always on hand, all put up directions enclosed. Nothing is so wonderful for children, too; it is an ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin that just about insures the health of young or old.

KENTON GRIDDERS LOSE TO FOREST

Defeat Larger School Team by Score of 18 to 6 at Forest

Kenton, Oct. 29—Despite the fact that they were defeated 18 to 6 by Forest high school Saturday in a hard fought game in that town, the Kenton high gridders are finding consolation today in the fact that they scored their first actual counter in more than five games already played this year.

Forest fans are greatly elated over their Kenton victory when their crack football squad triumphed over and trampled in defeat a much larger school. And the victory was all the more marked in that they played Kenton with a somewhat crippled line-up, a number of their star players being injured during the past week.

The locals chalked up their lone touchdown when Brindley, crack quarter, received a forward pass over Forest's goal line. Forest's scoring resulted chiefly from brilliant end runs and line bucking.

Next Friday the Kenton team will meet Upper Sandusky at Athletic field.

Can't sing with a cold

Opera stars, actors, public speakers have you ever noticed how infrequently they seem to have colds?

They just can't afford to be disabled by sniffles and sneezes. At the very first warning symptom—headache, chilliness, soreness in swallowing, tickling dryness in nose or throat—most of them take GROVE'S BROMO QUININE.

The result is that their audiences are never disappointed by postponed performances. "The show goes on," as the tonic and laxative benefits of the genuine GROVE'S BROMO QUININE tablets help them either to side step the cold entirely or to throw it off quickly. . . To be sure you are getting the world's leading cold and grip tablets, emphasize GROVE'S when asking for GROVE'S BROMO QUININE. Price 30c

RETURN FLIGHT OF ZEP IS UNDER WAY

Leaves Hangar at Lakehurst, N J, at Early Hour in Morning

creature of a fairyland the dirigible Graf Zeppelin soared into a starlit sky and a hanging full moon early today on the start of her return voyage to Friedrichshafen Germany, with 63 men and one woman on board She left the ground with a roar of her five mighty engines at precisely 1 54 30 a m

Majestically, almost haughtily it seemed, she rose with the moon beaming down upon her glistening silver sides She moved slowly and serenely forward and upward, and then swung into a wide arc She appeared to be suspended at times as she proudly circled the lights atop the hangar and headed in a northeasterly direction toward the expansive Atlantic with New York City directly in her path

Cheers burst from the throats of a little band of several hundred thrilled spectators as gradually the lights of the great air liner disappeared from view in the night. For they had witnessed a spectacle that held them breathless and thrilled beyond expression

Crew Ordered Aboard

They had seen every detail of the dramatic departure The farewell kisses The tuning up of the motors in the hangar The removal of the ship from the hangar The calm concern of the crew The bravery of the passengers And they had joined in the cries of "Auf Wiedersehen"

It was exactly 12 30 a m, when the motors of the Zeppelin began to hum in the hangar, signalling that the departure was imminent

"Passengers and crew aboard" was the order of the Capt. E Lehman, third in command

One by one the passengers mounted the wooden platform that had been built alongside the cabin of the ship Among the first to enter was Mrs Clara Adams of Tannersville, Pa, the lone woman passenger

"I'm thrilled beyond words," she exclaimed as she waved good bye to a woman friend in the crowd

Kisses Young Eckener

Knut Eckener, the commander's handsome 24 year-old son, was given a pleasant surprise when Miss Doris Horowitz, secretary to Joseph D Jessel, one of the passengers, dashed up on the platform and without any ado planted a kiss full upon his lips.

Eckener blushed furiously but he returned the kiss

The ground crew of 260 men sailors in blue uniforms with natty white caps, had assembled at the west end of the hangar Three blasts from the naval station siren called them to the ship They took their positions at the "spider ropes" which dangled from the dirigible Other men removed the blocks from beneath the Zeppelin

Doors Swing Open

Then the electrically propelled doors weighing thousands of pounds swung open at the east end And shortly thereafter the doors on the west end were partly opened too At 12 27 a m, the command was given to remove the Zep from the hangar The sailors seized the ropes while about 30 others held down the control cabin

Slowly the dirigible was walked out stern first through the east door The ship moved out backwards along a narrow railroad track clearing the hangar at 12 34 o'clock She was walked directly for about 200 yards further

Silhouetted against the moonlit sky, the 110 ton Zeppelin presented a never to be forgotten picture As she lay sprawled out on her belly she looked like some strange prehistoric creature that had come to inhabit the earth The bright moon glistened on the upper part of her silver body imparting an eerie appearance Slowly her nose was turned around to face in a southwesterly direction and away from the hangar doors. Then like some strange beast she crawled along the grass She moved forward about 100 yards or so and came to a dead stop

The motors began to roar The 30 men who were holding the bars surrounding the control cabin raised the dirigible above their heads The ship gradually pointed her nose upwards

McIvee Loses Out

A few minutes later she was high above the ground, her hull straightened out. Only a light here was flowing, just enough to unfurl the white flags atop the hangar Slowly the white cabin lights the green lights on the starboard side and the red lights on the port side disappeared from view

Two men who had hoped to be included in the passenger list had to be left behind The hardest luck befell Lieut Frank M McIver, commandant of Norton field Columbus, Ohio He was first cheated out of a flight to the middle west when it was cancelled last week and this morning was told the Graf Zeppelin could not accommodate him for the transatlantic voyage His ill luck was shared by James H McLoughlin New York

25 000 Pieces of Mail

Stored away in the Graf Zeppelin's hold are some 25 000 pieces of United States mail for delivery in various parts of Europe The mail was loaded aboard ship in the presence of a post office inspector

The airship is not carrying regular freight on the return journey owing to insufficient time for its handling A few parcels have, however been accepted, including one bale of cotton a case containing two typewriters package of copper plates and a bolt of silk on which is a painting of the Graf Zeppelin

Germany Ready To Welcome Graf

Berlin Oct 29—The Graf Zeppelin is coming home and all Germany is getting ready to welcome her on the completion of her epochal round trip transatlantic voyage

So sudden was the departure of the air liner from Lakehurst N J at 7 55 a m (Berlin time) that Germany was unaware of her take-off until it was announced by International News Service

Frau Eckener wife of Commodore Hugo Eckener, commander of the ship who lives at Friedrichshafen was notified of the departure of the dirigible via long distance telephone

"Thanks ever so much for the news," exclaimed the wife of the famous sky navigator "I am sure that everything will go all right this time I am entirely confident"

Friedrichshafen, the home of the Graf Zeppelin and the seat of the Zeppelin Works, buzzed with excitement There was a hasty scanning of weather bulletins and charts of North Atlantic air lines

First Nighters Highly Pleased With Opening Stock Company Show

Myrtyl Ross Players Greeted by Appreciative Audience in Launching New Entertainment Program at Grand Theater

Marion's first stock company in a number of years was cordially ... with the city's first nighters ... following its first performance at the Grand theater last night

There the Myrtyl Ross Players presented as their opening bill Avery Hopwood's "The Best People," a funny, ... comedy of life in the ... upper strata

With applause and comment to the management as a criterion the company will be favorite that M S Gross manager of the troupe hopes it will be

"The Best People" is an ideal opening play for a stock company in that it gives practically all of the cast opportunity to show their ability In addition it is brimful of clean jokes and funny situations

Capable Leader

Miss Ross is a pleasant personality and reads her lines with an ease that shows her to be a fine actress She also is director of the company and the completeness with which the company handled their roles on its first night speaks well for her work as a director

Bert Melville is the leading man with the company This week doing the role of a chauffeur who falls in love with the daughter of one of the first families

Jack Gordon as an aristocratic uncle, and Mae Kirby as a gold digging chorus girl both brought in as ... their roles and ability to fill the parts interested last night's audience

Virginia Duncan was the hysterical mother Ernest Sharpstein the understanding father In Ceiling the young English lord Louise Carter a ... spinster-stenographer Billy Dale the young son of the family and May Latle the honest little chorus girl with whom the aforesaid young scion fell in love

The stage settings were pleasing and sufficient

Manager's Announcement

Between acts last night Manager Gross welcomed the audience and asked co-operation of theatergoers He declared that his company would stay in Marion as long as the city wanted the players

With popular prices prevailing and with Marion rather hungry for the speaking stage the Myrtyl Ross players should fill a long felt need here

"Seventh Heaven," "The Cat and Canary" and "Abie's Irish Rose" are among the attractions promised by the company charged that much of the farmer's burden is due to the ever increasing levy made upon his efforts and interest in the form of excessive taxes

Outlines Road Program

Cooper advocated road building by competitive bidding rather than by day labor

"I am convinced" he said that such procedure will effect great economies and at the same time roads will be more rapidly completed and better supervised

The time has come due to the change of travel on our highways when we should relieve the farmer and home owner of all abutting assessments as a matter of fairness and justice

Cooper advocates more efficient use of gasoline tax and automobile license revenue rather than assessing land owners to the point of confiscation

He advocated a change in administration of the workmen's compensation law to make it work as smoothly and as quickly as an insurance company, which can pay a claim within a short time

Mouser who spoke briefly Saturday night, also addressed nearly 300 women from the Eighth congressional district at the afternoon luncheon Other speakers at the luncheon were Senator Simeon D Fess and Mrs Myers Y Cooper Miss Gertrude Jones state committee woman had charge of the afternoon meeting, which she had arranged in cooperation with Mrs Emory York of ... of the Marion county chapter of the Ohio Council of Republican women way and opened the doors from the other side In the rush for the outside a lot of the prisoners were hurt and could not get away and were burned to death," Reybucki related

"I was supposed to have died in the fire and to have done some brave things but I climbed over the walls with some other fellows and escaped I've been lying low ever since

The fire started from some radio or electric wires in the basement according to the story I heard If those doors had been opened when the fire was first discovered we all could have got out of the place in time even though the shack did go up like a paper fire"

Reybucki refused to tell the names of the men who escaped with him but asserts that six others had got away and that almost all of them are men reported as burned to death Authorities have placed the number of escaped men at five

Frank Reybucki is white and a laborer. He was committed to prison on Dec 31, 1926, for carrying concealed weapons His number is 59413

AL PLANS WHIRLWIND FINISH TO CAMPAIGN

Maryland, New York and New Jersey Scenes of Battle

BY GEORGE R HOLMES
Marion Star Staff Writer

Wilmington Del Oct 29—Gov Al Smith set forth today on the final week of the campaign calmly confident and determined to make one of those whirlwind finishes for which he has become famous in his state campaigns in New York

He enters the drive down the stretch encouraged by the detailed report he received on the general outlook from his national chairman John J Raskob, and refreshed from a week end rest in the country Governor Smith spent the week end at Raskob's home near here and for the first time in many hard travelling weeks he had an opportunity to make a detailed survey of the national situation with his campaign director He said everything looked all right

The final week is to be a strenuous one for the Democratic candidate He will deliver four speeches, more than he has yet attempted in a similar period They will cover three states Maryland New Jersey and New York, three states that are highly important to the Smith cause if indeed they are not vital New York is vital anyway for no political author ity can conceive of a Democratic victory one week from tomorrow should Governor Smith lose his own state's 45 electoral votes

Invades Maryland

Today Governor Smith invades Maryland a keen battleground as always in national campaigns Although usually Democratic in state elections, Maryland has a habit of annoying the Democrats by giving her electoral votes to the Republicans in national elections

Woodrow Wilson alone of the Democrats since Cleveland has carried the state Bryan lost it three times Once by only 405 votes Parker lost it in 1904 by a bare 51 votes

Four years ago Coolidge carried Maryland but was a minority winner as the combined Davis LaFollette vote exceeded his by 12 000 It is the Democratic task this year to hold the normal Democratic vote and capture the LaFollette following of four years ago—the same job they have had to tackle in so many western states

In Baltimore Tonight

Governor Smith's bid for Baltimore will be made in a speech delivered tonight in the same auditorium that saw Woodrow Wilson's nomination in the famous deadlocked convention of 1912 Preceding the speech there will be an hour's parade through the

There have been killing frosts and snows all about us, but here in the very heart of the garden spot of the world the weather continues to remain ideal—for fall, of course.

Lord Northcliffe's wife has finally divorced him, and just as likely as not we may wake up some morning and find that he has become Mr. Peggy Joyce VI.

A Rochelle, Illinois, man given a sentence of twenty days in jail for driving an automobile while intoxicated is not to begin serving it until November 7, so that he can vote, and thus we have another pointer to show what's the matter with the country. Too many courts are thinking more about politics than they think about the enforcement of the law.

"Who's going to speak," asks an exchange, "the German, French and such for the exported talking movies?" That's not troubling us so much as the matter of who is going to speak the English in those to be shown here at home.

Of the 970 shafts in the Donetz coal basin, the richest in Russia, but 250 are being operated, and they are being worked very indifferently at that. Since the execution of twelve engineers accused of sabotage, that class has left the district, with the result stated, as it takes more than manual labor to work mines. What an awful mess of things the exponents of "Liberty and Equality" have made in Russia!

Four to one is offered on Hoover in New York City, but election bets never come any nearer deciding elections than straw votes. The best they can do is to influence voters who always have a desire to be on the winning side.

In the Indiana campaign issue of the American Issue, no an Indianapolis wire reported Saturday, the Rev. F. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of that state, urges the defeat of David A. Myers, the judge who sentenced him for contempt of court, for reelection to the state supreme bench. We are not so sure that Governor Jackson helped the cause of temperance greatly by pardoning Shumaker before he entered upon his sentence.

Taste and Fresh Paint.

We never before have been so thoroughly committed to the gospel of fresh paint as we are today. During the last week or two our eyes have been opened as never before to the possibilities for improvement which may be worked in the appearance of buildings by the application of color in the selection of which taste has been exercised.

The coloring of the Claude Wallers block on west Center street has transformed it. True, the removal of the heavy overhanging cornice which makes it more nearly conform to the appearance of the adjoining structure helped decidedly, for the cornice was something of an eyesore, but even with the cornice removed the appearance of the front would have been far from what it is today had it not been for the taste used in selecting the color to be applied.

A second and still more marked example of what taste in the selection of colors will do is also to be had in the downtown business section. The Fahey Banking company is making some very decided improvements to the exterior, as well as the interior, of its block on north Main street, installing an entire new front to its banking-room and the entrance to the upper floors of the building as well as large grated prism glass windows along the alley to the south. But had no material change been worked to the exterior of the building, the colors utilized in painting the block would have taken it out of the commonplace. We can not recall ever having seen so marvelous a change effected in the appearance of a building by the use of paint. As it stands today, with improvements yet unfinished, it attracts and pleases the eye.

If improvements such as these can be worked to two of the oldest business blocks in the city, why can not improvement be worked in the same way throughout the business sections of the city. We do not mean to be taken as holding that the application of any old kind of paint will work for improvement in appearance. It is easy by the application of paint, to make a building look worse than it did before the paint was applied. We of Marion have reason to know that this is true. But we are not herein referring to that kind of painting. Our thought is to hold out the desirability of exercising taste in the selection of color which will make unsightly buildings not only sightly, but also make them look neat and pleasing to the eye. It would take but little expenditure thus to work great improvement in the appearance of the business sections of our city.

Awful Toll of Carelessness.

Charles M. Upham, secretary-director of the American Road Builders' association, has just completed and given out for publication an analysis of the causes of highway accidents, for ninety-five per cent. of which the human factor is responsible, which causes a daily economic loss in the United States of almost $2,000,000 and the death or injury of 2,261 persons. His figures for 1927 show an increase of 1,316 over the deaths of 1926, and he estimates that an average of 25,000 automobiles are involved in minor accidents every day.

Very naturally the great increase in highway accidents—it amounts to thirty-eight per cent. from 1922 to and including 1927—may be attributed to the increase in population and the increased number of automobiles, automobile registrations showing an increase of ninety per cent. during the period.

The figures developed by the Upham survey show that of 26,613 automobile deaths in 1927 more than two-thirds were those of pedestrians. Of the total deaths resulting from the use of motor cars on the highways, 3,486 were the result of physical conditions; in 11,367 pedestrians were the major factors and 11,765 were caused chiefly through the fault of motorists.

Thirty-two per cent. of the fatalities caused by pedestrians were due to the playing of children in the streets or in crossing streets in violation of traffic ordinances. Twenty-seven per cent. were due to adult jay-walking, sixteen per cent. to inattention, fourteen per cent. to confusion and eleven per cent. to other causes.

Of the deaths for which motorists are held responsible by Mr. Upham in his report, thirty-two per cent. were due to the inattention of drivers, twenty-three per cent. to speeding, twenty per cent. to traffic violations, nine per cent. to intoxication and sixteen per cent. to miscellaneous causes other than those specifically mentioned.

Of the deaths due to physical conditions, thirty-seven per cent. were due to fog, rain or snow, defects in machines were responsible for nineteen per cent., skidding caused sixteen per cent., eleven per cent. were due to road defects, strong lights caused seven per cent., poor street lighting a like percentage, and confusion in dimming lights three per cent.

Suming up the figures presented, we find that seventy-five per cent of the deaths for which pedestrians were responsible were due to carelessness and at least eighty-nine per cent. of them may be listed as preventable. Of the deaths in which the fault is attributed to motorists, the same percentage of seventy-five tells the story of carelessness and eighty-four per cent. at least of the total may be listed as preventable accidents. In a word, three-fourths of all the deaths resulting from automobile accidents are due to carelessness.

How much longer are sane motorists and sane pedestrians going to permit carelessness to result in an economic loss of seventy-five per cent. of $2,000,000 daily? How much longer are sane men and women pedestrians—we exclude the percentage of thirty-two due to the carelessness of children—going to permit carelessness to cause the death or injury of forty-three per cent. of 2,261 persons each day? In a word, how much longer should carelessness be permitted to exact a daily economic loss of $1,500,000 and the death or injury of 972 persons?

This is the time of the hunter's moon, and if anybody thinks it isn't being utilized let him watch the candidates out after votes.

Aimee Semple McPherson says that the teaching of the evolution theory in the United States is putting the youth of the land in peril. Maybe so, Aimee; maybe so. But the youth of the land is probably being taught a lot fully as dangerous if not a great deal more so.

A story from Edwardsville, Illinois, tells of the marriage of a girl of eighteen to a civil war veteran of eighty-eight, but it is possible that it is only his pension she has married.

Singapore is afraid that it will be shaken down by the eighteen-inch guns, sixty feet long and weighing 150 tons, which fire a projectile weighing a ton and a half, to be installed there. That is problematical, but it's a cinch that the British tax-payers will be shaken down to pay for guns of that size, if they have not already been.

The assistant secretary of the Chicago Employers' association says the racketeers are hurting the business of the city to a much greater extent than generally thought and that, unless the business men and politicians break their associations with them, it will cost the city $100,000,000 annually in trade and a loss of 500,000 in population. Hardly corresponds with the Chicago plan to become the biggest city on earth.

Poems That Live.

FAIRY FOLK.

There are fairies of the flowers,
And sweet fairies of the rain
Dance among the silver showers
As they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle
Misty music on the pane.

Do you know these eerie wingers
That go flitting 'neath the moon?
Have you heard these tiny singers
As they weave, weave, weave
Elfin fancies in a rune?

Have you seen the woodland ring,
Hidden deep in husky dells,
Where the fairy queen and king
Oh, so eerie, eerie, eerie,
Weave their melodies of spells?

Do you know the sprites who ride
On the leaves that drift and float
Down some golden sunbeam tide
To make merry, merry, merry,
In some dreamy Amarote?

You should know the fairies, dear—
They are elfins, but 'tis true
That the good God sends them here
With your dreams, dreams, dreams—
Sends them, dear, for love of you.

—Thomas Emmet Moore.

NEVER BETTER IN HIS LIFE.

Ill-Nature and Depression.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Is ill-nature purely mental or has it a physical foundation?

We meet plenty of persons who are cross, or depressed, or nervous, or unhappy. For the moment we will describe them all as ill-natured.

Why are they this way?

Discussing this matter is like the old question—Which came first, the egg or the hen? But it will be interesting and profitable, too, I believe, if we give the problem some consideration.

I have no doubt at all that a distressed and disturbed mind will upset digestion and, unless relief comes, will undermine the health. Worry has ruined many a life, or, at least, many days of many a life.

Bereavement, loss of position and every manner of misfortune, are prolific causes for worry and distress of mind. But in the absence of functional or organic disease of some sort will their effects continue indefinitely?

I think not. You may not agree with me and, if you are in serious opposition, please write and tell me why.

I can not believe that a kind Providence would leave us stranded on the beach of existence and permit us to suffer endlessly because of things we can not help. My theology may be wrong, but I could not bring myself to accept such a doctrine.

If a man is fundamentally sound, practicing the rules of hygiene, particularly as to simple eating, sunshine, out-of-door exercise, and an abundance of rest, if not of sleep, and giving himself interesting reading, listening to good music and keeping occupied—if these practices are observed, I am confident it will be a very rare case indeed that does not respond.

But if there is dyspepsia based on wrong eating, actual loss of function in the stomach or intestinal tract, or failure of the skin and kidneys to carry off the waste products, the mental kinks will be slow to straighten out. A local infection in teeth, tonsils, nose, gall bladder or pelvic organs, may be responsible for the absorption of poisons which disturb the brain and result in interference with cheerful thought.

Pain anywhere in the body, twitching of the muscles, pressure in the eyeballs—anything that drives away sleep may be followed by mental depression and ill-nature in one of its many forms. Living in a noisy place, failure to get away from glaring lights, submitting to perpetual stenches, imprisonment in stifling bedrooms, sleeping under heavy blankets—anything that disturbs the mental processes.

In many, many instances ill-nature may be traced to physical causes. If you are all the time cross or unhappy, seek to find out what is wrong with your body or one of its parts.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

H. R. Q—What is the cause of high blood pressure? Could a male patient of sixty-six have a blood pressure of 220?

A—May be due to failure in kidney functioning, constipation or improper diet over a period of time. Each case demands specific attention and treatment. The diet is an important factor.

A. N. Q—What would cause a sharp, intensive pain near the waist line on the right side? I am subject to constipation—would this be due to a liver condition?

2—What causes watering of the eyes? It is so profuse at times as to dim the sight—would this be due to a catarrhal condition?

A—Gases due to improper diet and poor elimination. The liver is probably sluggish. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2—May be due to tear duct condition, although a catarrhal condition might also be causing some of the trouble. Have the eyes thoroughly examined and then proper treatment can be advised.

E. G. Q—I am five feet four and one-half inches tall. How much should I weigh and how can I gain?

2—What will clear up a muddy complexion and blackheads?

A—Without knowing your age I can not tell you what you should weigh.

2—Careful diet, avoiding excessive sweets and keeping the system clear should be helpful along these lines. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Opinion.

'ONE HUNDRED PER CENT. AMERICANISM.'

Bishop H. Ashton Oldham, of Albany, told the Protestant Episcopal convention in Washington that 100 per cent. Americanism is the greatest single danger to world peace today, and then proceeded to give a definition of 100 per cent. Americanism that is all his own. According to the bishop, the 100 per cent. American "scorns other races, looks condescendingly on other nations;" is touchy about the rights of this country, and "prates about absolute sovereignty." The bishop also thinks that patriotism "needs to be purged of its base, vulgar and archaic perversion" and "instead of the childish desire to lick the world" should aim at making its country worthy of honor by its contributions to mankind.

The sort of "Americanism" Bishop Oldham deplores really exists only in the imagination of a few pacifists and in a few isolated stagnant pools here and there that remain untouched by the rush of modern thought and progress.

Certainly "100 per cent. Americanism" has nothing to do with the things the bishop deprecates. Originally the expression was coined as a protest against hyphenism, than which there is nothing more out of place in this or any other land. A 100 per cent. American has no divided allegiance. He believes in his country and values his heritage, stands up for legitimate American rights and interests against assailants, insists that the nation must be in a position to protect itself and enforce proper respect abroad, and declines to countenance schemes for making the United States the tool or financial victim of Old world powers. This does not prevent him from taking a broad outlook on life. It does not in any way involve militarism or provincialism or intolerance. The biggest, best, most far-seeing leaders in the land are "100 per cent' Americans," and far from being dangers to world peace, some of them have been in the front of the effort to bring about world peace. The real threats to world good understanding and peace produced in this country are those persons who go about preferring every other nation to their own, telling the people of other lands that America is abusing and imposing them; and generally slandering the country in which they were born.—Detroit Free Press.

FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN.

Few of us realize that it is a simpler task to hop the Atlantic than to make a non-stop flight across the North American continent. The statement, of course, is subject to some qualification. An east-west crossing of the North Atlantic is evidently a more difficult feat than that accomplished by Collyer and Tucker, and every ocean flight is more hazardous, due to the lack of safe landing places enroute. But the ocean flight can be, and usually is, shorter by several hundred miles than that just achieved by the two men mentioned, and certainly it is true that many more airplanes have succeeded in spanning the void that lies between Africa and South America, than have flown without pause between our Atlantic coast and the Pacific.

The contrast in figures is rather startling. Before Collyer and Tucker took off there had been only two successful attempts at a non-stop flight over their route in either direction, only two over any route in American territory linking the two oceans—that from east to west of the two army flyers, Kelly and Macready, in 1923, and that from west to east of Art Goebel last summer. Attempts to fly the Atlantic, on the other hand, have been successful in a dozen instances. It may be that more pilots have essayed the Atlantic than the continental crossing, but, even so, the proportion of those victorious strongly favors the water jump.

Yet the ocean flight still absorbs the popular imagination to a degree never attained by the overland hop and very probably always will. The latter may be a better test of airplane endurance. Without a doubt it is more in line with the functions of the airplane as a practical agency of transportation, since for long distances especially it must remain indefinitely an overland vehicle. But the hazard of the limitless sea and the notion of bridging the gap between two worlds will continue to make the other seem the more inspiring. Which only goes to show that popular acclaim is an imperfect measure of values. Not only in reaching their goal without a pause, but in breaking the record for the flight in that direction, Collyer and Tucker have performed an outstanding service in the interest of aviation.—New York Herald Tribune.

Marvels of Perspective.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Is it true that all tall buildings actually are narrower at the top than at the base? Such difference is noticeable when looking at the top of the building from below. Is it a trick of the eyesight? I have also noticed that when I look at the top of a building, facing its front, it looks as if it slightly leans backward and narrows at its root.—E. W. Niebergall, Chicago."

If you had studied the art of drawing—the elements of which ought to be taught to all school children—you would recognize that the appearances that you speak of are due solely to the effects of "perspective." This is a good enough word when once it is understood, but its Latin root, perspicere—"to see through or across"—does not make the English meaning very clear.

The meaning of perspective when used to explain the apparent narrowing of a tall building at the top, or its apparent leaning backward, involves the geometrical principle that two parallel lines when viewed lengthwise seem to approach one another, and if the distance is sufficiently great they appear to blend into one. A practical application of this principle on a stupendous scale causes a star which, like the celebrated Betelgeuse, may be 250,000,000 miles in diameter to appear a mere point of light. If Betelgeuse were shaped like a square column a quadrillion of miles in height, with its base centered on the sun, it would be wide enough at the bottom to cover nearly the whole solar system inside the orbit of Mars, though to an eye looking upward from near the base (as you look up the tall building) its top would be a point that you could hide behind a needle.

A familiar example of linear perspective is the apparent closing together of the rails of a track as the eye follows them for a long distance over level ground. Another very picturesque and beautiful example is exhibited whenever the sun behind the clouds seems to send out in every direction radiating shafts of light. Astonishing as it may seem to some, these shafts are really parallel beams, and their resemblance to spokes having the sun for a hub is an optical illusion. The seeming radiation of meteor showers from a fixed point in the sky is also an instance of this deception. The real paths of meteors are practically parallel.

A word about the "leaning back" of the tall building. This appearance arises from the same perspective effect that causes the top to appear narrowed. For the very reason that the bottom looks broader than the top, it seems farther away, not only in a vertical direction, but horizontally also. Looking up the face of a lofty building, one sees the side lines apparently approaching each other, like the rails of a track stretching away over the plain. But there are caprices of vision which sometimes cause the top to appear to impend over the observer; these depend upon circumstances of place, lighting, distance, etc. It is never safe to trust implicitly to the reports of our eyes. They are by all odds the best and most comprehensive of our senses of observation, and to their verdict we habitually refer nearly all doubtful cases, yet we have always to test with reasoning and logical inference every new thing that they show us. It would take a large volume to contain a full account of all that the brain, in a way that we can not explain, does in correcting and coordinating the raw information brought in by the uneducated senses. — Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

It is a great temptation to tell the boss all the details and processes by which you were able to get the results he was after. And in the telling of the story it is quite easy to infer your own cleverness and initiative and general capacity in the matter. Probably you are not "kidding" anybody except yourself. That's what we all do—fool ourselves and go away in the happy consciousness that we have fooled the boss. The fact is he is probably bored by your recital of details. He is less likely to get a good impression of you and to give you further promotion than he would be if you merely laid down the result and walked out on him.

It would seem to be very simple and easy to be fair. No matter what our personal opinion about a thing may be, it ought to be quite within reach of our powers to present a perfectly clear, fair statement of the case. But it is not so easy. Try it. Can you really appreciate and understand another man's viewpoint and sincerity about any issue? Can you really state the evidence without putting your opponent in an unfavorable light? If you can, you have an unusually fine, fair and analytical mind.

The hardest thing a salesman has to go up against is the "intangibles" in the mind of his prospect. What's that? Well, the salesman may be almost 100 per cent. perfect in his goods and his presentation. He may convince you that his reasoning is entirely correct. He may convince you that his proposition is a little better than the other fellow's. But the thing he is up against and that is hardest to beat is the unexplainable conviction in your own mind that for some reason or other you desire the other fellow's goods. The most human thing about human beings is their childish likes and dislikes. For these strange likes and dislikes they are often only partly responsible. Perhaps they are not responsible at all. These things are there. They are the intangibles of the mind—and they are hard to beat.

Red Cross Relief Work of Vast Extent, Report to Local Chapter Shows

More Than Million and Quarter Disaster Victims Aided in Year, Annual Summary Discloses; Marion Secretary Gives Details

More than 1,250,000 victims of disasters of various sorts have been aided by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year according to figures contained in the organization's annual report which was received here today by Miss Margaret L. Dowd, secretary of the Marion County Red Cross.

Sufferers in 60 disasters in this country and 28 abroad, 88 in all, have been extended relief by the American society and a total of 1,250,000 persons have been helped during the last fiscal year, according to the report. Americans aided have numbered 700,000, while 650,000 were in nine foreign countries in which relief work was conducted or in the insular and foreign possessions of the United States.

Only once during the last fiscal year has the American Red Cross found it necessary to appeal to the people of the entire United States for additional funds to aid disaster victims. This was the occasion of the recent hurricane which swept the West Indies and parts of Florida. At that time Marion county contributed $2,153.01 toward the fund or $653.01 over the set quota of $2,500.

Permanent Relief Fund

Money for relief work in each of the 87 other disasters has been taken from the funds raised each year at the annual roll call, which opens here Nov. 11. After the 1927 roll call the Marion County Red Cross chapter sent $100 to the national headquarters in Washington. The goal in both the 1927 and 1928 roll calls was set at 5,000,000 members by the national executive committee. Each chapter sent 50 cents from each membership received to Washington and retained the remainder of the membership fee for its own use. The lowest fee for membership is $1 but there is no set limit to the amount that may be subscribed. It is thus evident that relief in 87 of the 88 disasters has been extended from the $2,500,000 fund raised last year.

Floods raging over hundreds of miles, fires destroying whole villages, tornadoes and hurricanes sweeping over entire states, and death-dealing explosions combined to make the last fiscal year one of great calamities. The fiscal year of the American Red Cross extends from Nov. 11, 1927 to Nov. 11, 1928.

Tornadoes lead the list of disasters in which the Red Cross gave relief with 29. Fires run a close second with 21 while floods are third with 14. There were four earthquakes, four hailstorms and three mine explosions. The other disasters were miscellaneous catastrophes, including epidemics, ship wrecks, typhoons, famines, dam breaks, landslides and volcanic eruptions.

Two Outstanding

The two outstanding disasters of the year were the New England flood of November, 1927 and recurring overflows in the Mississippi valley. These overflows, together with continuing relief operations which have been necessary as a result of the great flood in the spring of 1927 have kept a large staff of workers busy in the valley.

In New England where swollen mountain streams swept down with torrential force and played havoc in 21 counties, the organization gave reconstruction aid to 3,501 families involving more than 17,000 persons. This disaster necessitated the expenditure of a relief fund in excess of $1,300,000, of which more than $500,000 came from the national treasury of the Red Cross.

Prosperity?

"During the campaign I have addressed certain questions to my Republican opponent, both in writing and on the stump. Up to date he has failed to answer. He prefers to discuss prosperity. I contend his 'prosperity' so far as the whole people are concerned exists only in his mind and in the minds of those others who prattle the quotations from the Republican campaign hand book.

"I have asked him what would have happened to the United States had his advice contained in the Saturday Evening Post of December 6, 1913, been followed. This advice was to junk our Army and Navy. As answer he discusses 'prosperity.'

"I have asked him whether he endorses the Anti-Saloon League and the actions of that League. I have directed his particular attention to that League's well known advocacy of commercialized courts, speed traps and home raiders. As answer he discusses 'prosperity.'

"I have asked him whether he endorses the action of the Republican National Committee in sending a Republican Assistant U. S. Attorney General into Ohio to make pleas of religious hatred to churchmen. As answer he discusses 'prosperity.'

"I have asked him about his vote against the increase of 10 per cent. in pay for night work over day work to railway clerks and postal employes. As answer he discusses 'prosperity.'

"I have charged him with having opposed improvement of the Ohio River and that he has never raised his finger in behalf of the Cuyahoga River. As answer he discusses 'prosperity.'

"In an article in the Yale Review, Autumn 1928 Number, he says: 'It is almost superfluous to point to the record of achievement of the Republican administration since 1921, but it may be confidently asserted that in no period in our history has more beneficent progress been made.' And again, 'The confusing legislation relative to World War service has been codified and reformed, and, in recognition of the debt which we owe to the veterans of the late war, we are now expending annually more than 700 million dollars for their relief.' To my question as to what part of this annual expenditure he favored with his votes, as well as my question as to the last Sinclair Oil Scandal he answers with a discussion of 'prosperity.'" —GRAHAM P. UNUSUAL YEAR

ENTRANCE of a dramatic stock company into Marion's theatrical activities brings up once more the vast changes that have come into the theater business here within the last year. A review may not be amiss.

First the Marion Photoplay Co. gave up its tenancy on the Oakland, the house being taken over by Holden Maxson, theater owner of Celina. After being remodelled and refurnished the house opened with several big pictures but the theater failed to draw sufficient patronage and John Huebner, manager, was named receiver. Now the theater is being operated by William Barry as a neighborhood house.

The Orpheum, closed for some months, reopened for Saturday and Sunday operation at low prices.

Next the Palace entered upon the scene with the beauty of the structure amazing Marion people. First, vaudeville was played but three days, next for a week and now the theater has a seven-day vaudeville and picture policy.

With the filing of the receivership action for the Marion Photoplay Co. the greatest changes were seen. The Marion was closed and the Grand and Orpheum operation continued.

Now the Martyl Ross Players take over the Grand for a season of stock with a lineup of offerings that looks exceptionally attractive.

This will enable Huebner to open the Marion as a straight picture theater.

Probably the greatest change of the year was in Sunday opera at theaters, the fight which the Sunday pictures had two trials in being legalized.

NAMES SUBSTITUTE

KIDDIES in the schools have been duly concerned about the coming departure of their chief, Supt. Jesse H. Mason, who has resigned to become superintendent at Canton.

One first grader mournfully went to his mother the other day.

"Who do you s'pose will be our Mr. Mason now?" he asked with sad voice.

"I don't know," answered the mother. "I wonder who it'll be?"

The lad, who by the way goes to Greenwood school, thought for several minutes and then said: "Well I s'pose it'll be Mr. Peacock."

Mr. Peacock, is Jim Peacock, custodian of the Greenwood school.

COMES IN HANDY

IF one reads the newspapers one will have discovered long before this that contemporary intoxicants and flowers have come to have an exceedingly close connection. Yes it is a bond that sometimes continues at the grave even if it is broken after the grave has been filled. Of course we are speaking of flowers for the dead not the for the living' variety.

But in the office of the clerk of the municipal court of Marion that bond has been made even closer. Yes, it has there assumed the proportions of the well known sisters under the skin' sentiment.

A Marion citizen of doubtful value to the commonwealth was brought in by city police and charged with illegal possession of intoxicating liquor. His moon was in a mason jar. The desk sergeant labeled jar of moon and stowed it away as evidence against the accused. After the case had been tried the mason jar with 'moon' inside was left untouched.

And there jar and moon remained until one day many people became kind-hearted at once and the same time and heaped so many flowers upon the willing hands of the stenographers in the office of the clerk of the municipal court that they shortly ran out of vases. So they hied themselves back to police headquarters, commandeered the jar and the 'moon' separated the two, and used the jar as a vase.

STRANGE SIGHTS

THE time of year has rolled around when the people you see on the streets of Marion may not be at all the people you think you see. All rather complicated, but all around the town now, from 7 o'clock in the evening until morning, you can see cats conversing at length with hoary witches, gypsy maidens stealing the hearts of roy young Englishmen, and all manner of odds and ends of humanity hobnobbing on the street corners.

Halloween is the season in the year when no one cares particularly how awful unique or funny they look, every one is out for a good time and hopes the other fellow enjoys himself as well. The streets of Marion are beginning to display specimens of the above mentioned types this last week before the great night when parties galore and a mardi gras will enliven the village.

PARTY SPIRIT

THE old time campaign hasn't altogether vanished! Not yet.

The youngest generation still takes its politics seriously.

For example coming down State st. yesterday, one heard two sidewalk hardened youngsters in a verbal warfare.

It ended:

"Well, you're nothing but a dirty old Democrat!"

"Well, I wouldn't be n'old Republican, like you."

And, so on, but not to bed, as McIntyre would say.

DISCARDED PET

APPARENTLY, the intoxicating after effects of prohibition brew had this particular connoisseur of pets down. After staggering blindly up the alley that runs between Court st. and the Big Four railroad, he dropped his pet and left it lying in the vacant lot back of the Albert Bros. garage for storing automobiles.

A mechanic from the garage went out and brought the pet in out of the wet. It now reposes in all its reptilian glory on the top of a filing cabinet in the office of the garage.

Undoubtedly, the reason for this case of cold-blooded even if unpremeditated, desertion of an old friend may be explained by the unresponsive attitude assumed by the pet. But it is just possible that the home brew victim had decided that he was suffering from another attack of the dear old D. T. The pet, it may now be told, is a very, very dead young alligator preserved in a bath of alcohol in a securely capped mason jar.

But the home brew victim should have known that the alligator could not bite him as long as he kept the jar capped.

RESCUED

HERE'S one on a member of the gentler sex. One night this week at the Grand no little stir was caused in a certain portion of the theater by an attractive young woman who claimed she'd "dropped her hat."

All persons in seats within a radius of some three feet busied themselves searching for the top piece, groping about under the seats and peering down the aisle. Suddenly the young woman was struck by a brilliant thought and, asking the gentleman on her right to rise she found the hat, not too badly crushed, safely tucked away underneath him.

The less said about the embarrassment of the unfortunate gentleman who hadn't "looked before he sat," the better.

SPECIAL FLAVOR

ANYONE seeing the new "wine-dipped" cigars being shown in one of the local drug store windows will know at first sight that not all of the "whoopee" went into the making of them. There may be a faint suggestion of a wine taste in the smokes—this reporter hasn't found out—although the opportunity has been offered, but wagers a high that the bloke who fashioned them had a breath that assured his friends of a ... in later. ... part of it ... the cigars ... the ... the ... which has been given them. Here they lie in their box like several links of beautifully waxed bologna, the advertising ... and one ... cover.

"Triple-action" your cough!

the Cough Syrup with TRIPLE ACTION
1. Soothing
2. Mildly laxative
3. Clears air passages

FOR 80 YEARS, Smith Brothers have been the nation's experts at relieving coughs.

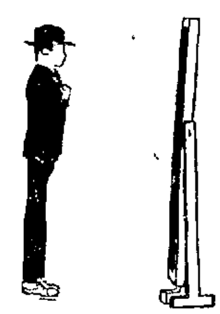

Now they have produced an entirely new and better cough syrup. This scientific remedy works fast.

Specialists say three actions are necessary to stop coughs. Smith Brothers' triple-action Cough Syrup has been especially developed to accomplish all three: It (1) soothes the irritated membranes of the throat (2) maintains healthful freedom of the intestinal tract and (3) clears congested air passages.

The familiar delicious flavor of Smith Brothers' cough drops is in this syrup. It's pleasant to take! No opiates, no narcotics. Absolutely safe for children.

And the price is easy to pay. In the red box, at all druggists. 35c

Hallowe'en Musicale
at Lawrence Studio

An enjoyable musical entertainment was presented at a masque Hallowe'en party given at the studio of May Evangeline Lawrence, 610 East Center st., Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock by members of the Schubert Music club, the senior pupils of Miss Lawrence, and the B Sharp Music club, composed of her junior pupils.

The rooms were attractively decorated by the committee in charge and with the many colored costumes of the members, presented an artistic setting for the performance. The program opened with a grand march with Miss Genevieve Doering and Miss Enid Little at first and second pianos. Members of the clubs formed in two lines and marched in single file toward each other, around the rooms. Among the most striking costumes were those of two Indian braves, a large brave from the Schubert club and a smaller brave from the B Sharp club, who viewed the marchers from the side lines.

At the close of the march, masques were removed and the program continued with Miss Mary Heininger, president of the Schubert club presiding. A duet, "Anitra's Dance," by Grieg, was played by Miss Eula Bain and Miss Mary Heininger. "Song of the Harvesters," Tellier, Miss Juanita Kimmel, duo, "Mister and Mistress Robins," Billiro, Henry Schuler, first piano and Miss Constance Butterworth, second piano, "Fairy Land Music," Piaget, Miss Elizabeth Mahaffey and "Puck," Grieg, Miss Kathryn Schneider, preceded a story in music, "How the Elephant Got His Trunk," Frieda Peycke, given by members of the B sharp club with Miss Lawrence at the piano.

A solo, "Bre'er Fox," Grant-Schaefer, was presented by Miss Lena Schaber. Misses Virginia Thomas, Enid Little, Kathryn Schneider and Genevieve Doering gave a piano quartet, "The North Wind," Kern, and Miss Iona Zieg was heard in a solo, "The Pygmies' Midnight Frolic," Preston.

This group was followed by an Indian powwow given by Josephine Butterworth, Mary Lee Reedy, Virginia Gilbert, Roselyn Walker and Evelyn Winegarder, with Henry Schuler at the piano interpreting "Indian Dance," by Charles Overholt. Cyril Scott's "Danse Negre," was played by Miss Eula Bain, after which Edwin Wilson, accompanied by the Rhythmic orchestra, played "Indian War Dance," E. R. Kroeger.

The program closed with a duet number on two pianos, "The Camel Train," William Bain, played by Miss Virginia Thomas, Enid Little, Genevieve Doering and Eula Bain, accompanied by the Rhythmic orchestra.

Refreshments were served by Miss Edith Smith of the Schubert club, assisted by a committee from the B Sharp club. In addition to the regular refreshments a pleasant surprise was given by a nine year-old member of the B Sharp club, who presented a Hallowe'en basket filled with cookies cut in fancy shapes, which she had baked herself.

Beauty and the Million

DRAMATIC STORY OF AMAZING ADVENTURE

BY WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

CHAPTER FORTY FOUR

The very quickness of the report, the tone carried a conviction to Renshaw of the truth of what he said. The thought wakened him, a wave of conflicting emotions swept him. Was Blake to be his rival, very tame.

He forgot again the belief in what Judge had told him but it was coming right. Now each hooked a dozen trivial things confirmed horrid implication of what Trowbridge had said.

Why should this girl, this Margaret Lamar, desired of many men, upon rich men, men with whom really he couldn't hope ever to compete, were ready and anxious to gifts of every sort, have singled him out? She knew, or, at least, one must have divined, that he was not a kind of man it is profitable for a gold digger to know and spend time with.

Yet she had voluntarily left the party at Long Beach to drive back with him. She had made the most of their chance meeting—or had that meeting been a chance one as up to this moment, he had fully believed? She had urged him to meet her after the theater—he must have known he would come. She had—there could be no doubt of it—been more than willing for him to stay at her apartment when he took her home. It was due to his own choice, not to hers, that he was here now, instead of there with her.

And he mar'le, had imagined that it was a real l ng for h m that had prompted her! It was, now t at he looked back about l qu the face of it that that should be so. He had been as easily duped, tricked, as some callow boy, a sort of rollo. He had succumbed without a struggle to the lure of a practised mistress of her charms, a professional vamp, accustomed by long training to persuading men to believe that she was the victim of their irresistible attractions! What a fool he had been!

Trowbridge, watching him found it easy enough to guess what was going on in his mind.

Don't take it so hard, old man, he said. Lord—you're not the first man who's fallen for that sort of thing and you won't be the last. We've got about as much chance against a woman like that, when she really goes after us, as a bird has with a snake. Look here—all I want to know now is whether she ever had a good chance to get that letter?"

Jim looked at him. The scene in Margaret Lamar's apartment was before his eyes. The girl tempting lovely, all her beauty revealed to him leaning over. His arms about her hard clinging for an ecstatic moment to him. Yes—she'd had a chance! A revulsion of feeling came over him like a sharp attack of nausea. He nodded.

Yes, he said. She—she could have taken it. But— He caught himself. "Look here! I didn't stay. I'd— I—I guess I could have, but I didn't. I didn't want to."

Good for you!" said Trowbridge heartily. That sort of thing—oh well the devil—there's nothing in it that's all. I'm no prude, but—well I don't like that way of doing things. I don't believe you do either. Come on—you've got nothing to reproach yourself with. And—it may not be as bad as it looks.

"I guess it isn't—I guess it's worse," said Jim. "I can't beat Blake once he knows where the lawyers are. They'll spill the beans as soon as he goes to them. Judge Grant told me he would—and he'd have to."

I'm not thinking about that," said Trowbridge. "I'm sitting up nights at first this end. Ten to one Lamar hasn't seen Blake yet—till she does we've still got a chance."

"Look here—there's one thing," said Jim. "How did she know I had that letter?"

She probably didn't. It was just a chance—and it happened that she won. Figure it out for yourself, Jim. Blake's been sure there was some paper that would tell him what he wanted. He had this place searched and didn't find it. He's probably been through your office files—the chances are there's one of his pinf spies in your office."

Jim nodded.

I guess that's so all right," he said. He certainly had some one in the real estate firm working for him.

Right. Blake's there, you know, when it comes to doing a good, complete job. You had he doesn't work as hard when he's got a straight proposition as when he's got a crooked one. Well anyway there it was. He knew you must have a paper—he couldn't find it here or in your office. The only chance left was that you were carrying it. He put it up to Lamar to get it.

"Lord—you make him sound more of a worm than I ever thought he was even!"

"He's about as warm a worm as comes if you ask me," said Trowbridge. "As I say it's no matter of gossip about him and Lamar. It's well known. She's crazy about him according to the talk along Broadway. They figure her a straight shooter. She's—well there's Blake of course but the story is that she doesn't cheat the way most of that lot do. I don't think you were as much of a sucker and an easy mark as you've been thinking yourself, Jim. Lamar's not the ordinary girl of that sort."

"Thanks! Somehow I don't get as much comfort out of that as I might! The mischief's done any way you look at it."

Not yet. It probably will be, but we've got a fighting chance. I think I'll go after Lamar."

What do you think you can do with her?"

"I wouldn't say I thought I could do anything. I want to see her though. You can't tell. And we've everything to gain if I can get anywhere with her and nothing to lose if I can't. We can't be any worse off."

"That's true enough. I—Is there anything I can do, that you can think of?"

Not right away. If the worst comes to the worst and we get to be sure that Blake's going after your lawyers you might make one more stab at them—try to get them to hold out on him. He's got no right to any information from them, when you come right down to it.

Trouble is he's got so many influential connections—even if he doesn't know these lawyers he can go to them with letters of introduction strong enough to compel attention.

"Yes—and I don't think I could do anything with Judge Grant, anyway."

"No—but you can try. And, if it does come to a show down let Blake do the talking. Admit nothing—deny nothing. A lot of men have thrown away a good position by talking too much—especially if they lose their tempers. All right. Don't worry any more than you can help. I'm going to see Lamar."

"I don't quite see why you're so willing to help me—"

"Oh well—if you come through I'll probably hold you up! Might get a job doing publicity for you—you can't tell."

"If I come through you can have anything I've got!"

"And—well—I've had a couple of run-ins with Blake. You know—that's one of your best assets, Jim. The number of people Blake has managed to antagonize at one time and another I'll bet there are people in this town who'd give a good deal to get Blake—people he doesn't even know dislike him!"

Trowbridge went out then. Jim went to bed. But he couldn't sleep. All very well for the reporter to tell him not to worry—but how could he help worrying? And he was sick with humiliation about the whole Margaret Lamar episode. He had been drawn on by her charm, he had been in a mea ure disloyal to his love for Irene. Whatever went wrong now was his own fault, no use dodging that unpleasant fact.

The thought of Irene grew into an obsessing one before morning. So much so that, after breakfast, he telephoned to her. Her voice was cool.

Yes, Jim," she said. "What do you want?"

"I—what's the matter, Irene?" he said. "Why are you so chilly?"

"Am I?" Her laugh came to him clear and remote. "Why—I don't know that I can tell you. Why don't you—why don't you ask your friend Miss Lamar? She might have an explanation!"

"Irene!" he cried. But a click in his ear told him she had hung up the receiver.

Feed Fat Away

The Food is in Marmola

It seems queer, but the modern method is to feed away excess fat. The food is a gland substance, taken from cattle and sheep. The amount decided by scientific tests is two grains a day.

The reason is this: Medical research has found that the great cause of excess fat lies in a weakened gland. It is really a disease. No exercise or diet can correct it.

When that gland is under active, too much food goes to fat. Physicians, the world over, in treating obesity, now try to correct that condition.

The main factor is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. They were perfected in a famous medical laboratory. People have used them for more than 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Not only constant loss of weight, but new health and vitality. Thus the use has spread, from year to year, until countless people use this modern method.

You can see the results wherever you look. Slender figures are the rule. Excess fat is now a rarity. Men and women try to look and feel their best.

Try this method for excess fat in any part that makes you look old or abnormal. Watch the fat fade away. Watch the new vigor that comes. You will be amazed and delighted. Don't go on with a weight of fat when so many are getting slender. Start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and when I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth I told him he was lucky to be a dog and not to have an aunt that wanted to wash him and make him whiter than snow, and all he did was to wag the whole end of himself like I was telling him he was a fine dog. Which he is but which hasn't go anything to do with this.

When I had finished the cows and turned them loose to go over to the vacant lot and wait for us and had fed my face and started to get up from the table my aunt started to get up too. I had seen her lookin at me almost all the time since I had been home from being locked in under the stink factory. First she got the water too cold, and then she got it so hot I asked her if she thought she was scalding hogs, and she said it was something like that. Then I asked her if she knowed what a hog's aunt was and I got a wallop with the wash rag that made me grab the chair the wash basin was on to keep from falling, and that spilt the hot water all over one of her feet and that got me a wallop on the other side that straightened me up. She is smarter than I thought she was. I thought she would have to figure that one out and I would be gone before she got the answer.

When I got back from the pasture and got to the Sunday school I sat on the bench nearest the stove and when I got warmed up I smelt so bad that the teacher sent Aunt Miles whose father works in the stink factory home because she thought it was him brea hing. Bunts clothes are mud out of his father's old ones and when he gets warmed up he is some thing fierce. Our teacher says Bunt is a problem to her. She says he has got a face like a cherup and he smell like a chemical explanation whatever that is. She says he has the sweetest and smells the soutest of any boy she has ever knowed but she says he ought to develop into a strong character.

Today there was a fight in the basement between Mush and his wife that got so bad that our teacher said she would go down and stop it but I bet she went down to watch it. Mush came here and said he was tired of driving a truck all day and knitting a schoolhouse all night and he was going to cut out trucking and that is why the teacher went down stairs and Mush has went back to trucking and I don't blame him. Mush's wife was strutting her stuff at recess and told Pebble that two can live as cheap as one, and save more money. If both of them have got a job. Pebble asked her if she didn't love her husband, and she said she didn't love nobody else. And that is lucky for somebody else.

All men are free and equal as contestors in a foot race are. They are all permitted to toe the same mark at the same time. After that, it's up to them.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADELE GARRISON

Mary Corroborates Lillian's Surmise.

"KATIE," he returned as if with one eye at Lillian's ... "I'd like to ... little ..." ... "Mr. ..." I ... smiled.

"Yes Katie," she said. "Thank ... Katie! She'd like to have lunch ... but it ... till after Mary's ... tele..."

... I read in Lillian's ... she didn't ... she was as eagerly excited—till eyes too—when she talked to me.

"Exactly," Lillian said. "I'd rely upon it she has some crazy idea that it's up to her to find out what Mary's doing. That reflect of the ... she ... which she ... to know ... almost was enough to set her imagination working overtime. And I sure would have liked to see Katie as a ... all afternoon my laugh muscles would be sore for a week afterward. But it's possible she may have gotten hold of something. Better lend a gracious ear to her confidences. Madge, if she tries to give you any."

"I'm afraid I'm too late," I said contritely. "I was so annoyed at her hysterics concerning Mother Graham that I've avoided her markedly ever since she came back. You know how touchy she is."

"Nobody knows better," Lillian assented, "and she probably will be sulky for a while. But you'd better give it a try anyway. Here come the wanderers now! Isn't Mary the prettiest thing?"

Mary justified her comment as she came up the path from the front gate with young Mr. Jackson—as Prince Georges was still known to everyone outside the few of us in his secret—lending chivalrously toward her.

Behold the ideal hero!" Mary said as they came onto the veranda. "He's trailed me into every embroidery shop in the Hamptons, East, West, and South until I finally found the shade I wanted.

And never once lost his patience?" Lillian inquired incredulously.

"Never once. Even pretended to enjoy it," Mary rejoined, wrinkling her nose at her ... admirer.

"Then he indeed deserves a laurel wreath," Lillian said solemnly, while Prince Georges turned a protesting face toward Mary.

"Oh I say," he exclaimed. "I wasn't pretending at all. I really enjoyed watching you—you bargain so prettily. And then too, I was terribly amused—where was it, Miss Mary, which Hampton—East, South, North, West?—I never can tell them apart."

"South," Mary said quickly, with more emphasis I thought than his idle question demanded. "There is no Northampton around here. I suppose you mean that old freak we saw on the street."

"Yes, the one who ... most of the ... this afternoon."

I switched slightly at the ... word ... and shot a furtive glance at Mary from underneath my eyelashes. Was my imagination tricking me, Katie's, or was there a look of annoyance in her eyes? But her answer was ready and cordial of it.

"Oh yes. I saw her first when I went in there to mail that letter I'd kept forgetting for days," she explained. "She was fussing around at the desk where they make out money orders. Perhaps you saw her up there through that thick ... curtain ... I ever imagine. I never saw such a ... in my life."

I caught my breath in sudden ... of the heavy ... which I ... of Katie's suitcase.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

AKRON PLANT PLANS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Goodyear Zeppelin Co To Construct Huge Factory and Hangar

Akron Oct 29—With preliminary work going forward for the Goodyear Zeppelin Company's big plant and with plans under way to establish the largest training school for commercial aviators in the country here, Akron today was on the eve of becoming one of the most important aviation centers in the world

Actual field work will begin within the next week on the Goodyear Zeppelin hangar which will be the largest building of its kind in the world It will be larger than the hangar at Lakehurst and will be capable of housing two monstrous superdirigibles such as the Graf Zeppelin

Goodyear will build two dirigibles for the navy each larger than the Graf Zeppelin at a total cost of about $8,000,000 The company will also build Zeppelins for commercial use and is already ranked as the foremost lighter than aircraft manufacturing concerns in the world

Much of the labor which the Zeppelin company will use in its projects will be recruited locally but hundreds of men will be brought in from Cleveland, and other nearby cities Goodyear officials said today

Details of the aviation school to be established here have not yet been worked out and the project has been kept secret It is known to have the tacit approval of the Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics and of government officials

HALF-DAY SCHOOL SESSIONS IN SIGHT

Division of Daily Classes Certain Unless More Rooms Are Provided

Approach of Crisis

Evidence of how rapidly Marion has been approaching its school crisis is found in the fact that five years ago there were more than a dozen vacant school rooms in the city Today all classrooms are occupied two first rooms are being used full time and [illegible] classes are housed in five basement rooms and two annex rooms There is only one basement room in the city not in use at this time

What will be done with 240 additional pupils practically certain to be enrolled next year

The board of education has prepared after approximately two years of careful investigation and deliberation a building expansion program which will solve the local school problem This has been done with full realization that unless it is possible to work out the plan Marion will be confronted with the most serious situation in the history of its public school system

The board and school executives can not proceed with consummation of the program however without authority from the citizens and this authority is to be sought at the polls on Nov 5 Thus the question of whether the local school situation already extremely serious is to be remedied or whether it will be permitted to become worse is a responsibility resting entirely with the people

Organization Disrupted

In a previous article of this series attention was called to the fact that because of building limitations local school authorities have been forced to abandon plans for school organization based upon the latest and most efficient methods It has been shown that instead of one type of organization with elementary junior high and senior high schools definitely separated Marion is forced to operate with a makeshift arrangement constituting seven different types of organization

That situation is in itself a sufficient argument to warrant every citizen of Marion voting for the new building program This city should be equipped to operate its schools as efficiently as other places of similar size and without facilities for maintaining the one organization plan recognized throughout the country as the best such service is impossible

Inability to maintain the most effective organization however is not the most serious circumstance resulting from the city's overcrowded buildings

That phase of the situation is secondary to the fact that overcrowding of rooms and requiring pupils to attend classes in basements and other improvised quarters is a menace to their physical and mental welfare

A survey of school conditions has revealed that buildings are crowded in every section of the city

One of the most serious situations exists in the extreme west part of the city at Olmwood building where 85 first grade pupils are housed in a basement play room divided by a temporary partition The only fresh air and heat reaching 41 of these children must come from the other room through open transoms or doors

If four rooms were added to this building with the present ... the ... could be ... by ... of ... and ... be ... to ... from ... rooms ... ... to ... There is ... of ... for building

All available classrooms at Central Junior high school building are in full use and are also ... classes were reduced to ... by the state ... at least 20 ... There is no space available for other building

Forest Lawn building has ... 300 pupils ... the Vernon Heights Junior high building which will be used only for junior high purposes Due to the transfers ... of the eight ... at Forest Lawn still have more than 7 pupils enrolled

Pearl and Furnace buildings have crowded one group of children into a basement room In addition to this situation 12 of the 14 regular classrooms in these two buildings have ... or more pupils

147 In Two Rooms

A total of 147 children are crowded into two home rooms at the Oakland Heights building Should four additional rooms be constructed there would still be no room with less than 35 pupils enrolled

An old frame annex building in use at the Silver Street building is generally regarded as nothing short of a disgrace for the city of Marion Yet it must be used as the school quarters for 68 children in order that they may have some sort of educational convenience In addition to the annex 10 of the regular class rooms at Silver Street building have 5 or more pupils enrolled except with approximately 45 each

Only pupils in the first four grades can be accommodated at North Main Street building those of grades five six and seven being forced to go to other buildings some located far from their homes At Oak Street building half of the rooms have more than 40 pupils each and no room has less than 35 At State Street building there is an average of 4? pupils to a room and all rooms are in use At Marl Street building the average is more than 47 pupils for each room and in addition the teachers rest room is being used for an overflow sixth grade The seventh grade pupils who should be in this building have been transferred to State Street

Vernon Heights Jammed

Vernon Heights Junior High school grades are crowded into half of the building to make room for 170 overflow children from neighboring grade buildings The grades have been taking over one room a year at this building the last five years There are no other rooms available This means that with additional growth half day sessions or some other temporary expedient must be resorted to

Harding high school is taking care of its congestion by operating one extra period a day If Harding were to run on a six period day 310 pupils would be without class room space Should it run on a supervised study plan with a six period day as do many other high schools of the state there would be approximately 225 pupils without quarters

DELIVERY BY AIR

Marion To Get Columbus Papers In Airplane Service This Week

Marion is on the route of an airplane newspaper delivery service inaugurated today by The Columbus Dispatch. Three airplanes will be used by The Dispatch in this new service which will be given to towns within limits extending west to Springfield and Urbana, north to Kenton, Marion, Bucyrus and Galion, east to Coshocton, Zanesville and Marietta, and south to Chillicothe, Gallipolis and Athens during the week.

Norton field, Columbus, will be used as a base of operations. Trucks will take the papers from the office of The Columbus Dispatch to the field, where they will be transferred to the already warmed-up planes. The airplanes to be used include a Fairchild cabin monoplane powered with a Wright Whirlwind 220-horsepower motor, a Waco biplane powered with an Ox-5 90-horsepower motor, and a Travelair biplane also powered with an Ox-5 motor.

Papers will be dropped from the planes in a parachute when the towns are reached. They will be already attached so that the pilot need only push them over the side of the cockpit.

Anxious to get to Canada to engage in farming, a nine-year-old boy stowed away on a ship at Cardiff, Wales, and was not found until it arrived at Swansea, whence he was returned to his home.

Behind the Scenes in Hollywood

BY DOROTHY HERZOG
Marion Star Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD—The languor that has pervaded the nickel industry for the past sundry months persists. One might diagnose it as pellicious anaemia.

Production continues and box office names remain. That lost the seat of ailment.

It may be caused by the frightened consciousness of an inferiority complex.

The public started the conviction.

Picturegoers became filled at the onslaught of mediocre films showing with monotonous frequency in their theaters. They demanded a change, a drastic change, and a quick one. Their demand was felt by the drop in theater receipts.

To plug the gap and stimulate waning interest, exhibitors, backed in many cases by producers, instituted the lavish prologue. Quantity was expected to substitute for quality. It did—for a while. But—

Again the public lapsed irritable.

At this momentous, floundering lull, the Warner crowd raced through with a flurry of talking pictures headed by "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson.

Excelsior! The talkies created a sensation. Money flowed into the box office and Warners discovered they could smile and mean it.

The non talky producers, fearfully alert to public disapproval of their efforts, headed pell mell in the direction of the talkies.

Famous Players, piloted by Roy Pomeroy, came through first. M. G. M. prepared with a thoroughness characteristic of this well knit organization and is now in a position to make and offer talky pictures of an excellent grade.

United Artists were slower. Their talky stage will not be ready for weeks. Mary Pickford has first bid for it. On it, she will make "Coquette," unless her trip to New York results in other arrangements.

Universal is arming for the talky fray.

On all talky pictures appears the name Western Electric.

Wall Street has prowled to motion picture studio doors era this and producers for the most part have held their own against this powerful street.

Western Electric, however, is sought. Which is the difference. Before talky apparatus is supplied studios by this concern, said studios contract to the Western Electric apparatus for three years or more.

AL JOLSON

The triumph of the talkies has taken producers by surprise. This entrance of new forces, the sudden scramble to sign prominent stage names and writers, the limited time in which to seek equilibrium to let talkies and silent dormice, the rupture of production's even course and the knowledge that they—the producers—must make good to public and financial backers

NO MORE GAS FROM INDIGESTION

Stomach sufferers can only get safe, quick and lasting relief from gas, sourness and indigestion pains by correcting their causes—"too much acid." The stomach needs an alkaline to neutralize its excess acid, sweeten its food contents and make digestion normal and painless. A safe, reliable treatment is Bisurated Magnesia—powder or tablets. Just a little after every meal stops all chance of indigestion and guarantees stomach comfort or money back. Denney & Cooper and druggists everywhere sell it on this understanding. Begin today to enjoy your food after as well as during meal time. A test will tell!—Adv.

BY JOHN W HEISMAN

CAN you imagine a 230 pound man catching a forward pass? Then what will you say to the tale one of those proportions catching the first very long pass ever made in foot ball?

You are wondering how a center would be permitted by rule to take a pass since only ends and backs ordinarily are eligible to do that. Well you see, this happened in 1906 the first year in which forward passing was allowed and the game was between Michigan and Pennsylvania at Ann Arbor. And expressly because the center is not an end usually and therefore the opponents would not be likely to pay much attention to the snapper of the ball (who generally is the center man of the line) Michigan and Schultz got away with this neat stunt. It went this way.

Michigan gave a signal that indicated a series of two plays the second play of which was pulled off with lightning speed and without any fresh signal being given. Understanding their business the Michigan linemen on the right lined up for the second play on the left side of Schultz, along with those ordinarily playing to his left. Thus Schultz for this second play, was himself the extreme man or end on the right but was still the snapperback as well. Thus by virtue of playing on the end for that one play he became eligible. But this was the detail that the Penn players overlooked.

WELL, Schultz snapped the ball back to the quarterback who ran with it to the left and double passed it to the left half. The latter came running with it to the right and along with him several blockers for protection. While this hocus pocus was going on in the backfield 'Germany' was travelling toward the Penn goal line his long light hair flaunting the breezes like flaming meteor. Comes now another meteor—the ball, shooting a full 40 yards right into Schultz' upraised hands. No Penn man has paid the slightest attention to him and none is near him. 'Germany' gathers in the oval with the grace and skill of a Ty Cobb.

This incident is narrated to show the reader how fast this big man was on his feet and how dexterously he could use his hands. Big he undoubtedly was, but let no one think that man mountain was slow. Had he been they never would have called on him to back up the lines on defense. Yet just there was where he shone the brightest. If they tried to send a play through the middle no three men could take him out. If they directed it around the end when they got there they were certain to find that leviathan awaiting them. No trick fooled him, no speed outstripped him. In him they found the immovable wall, except when he willed to move. Torrey, of Penn, he played a roving center on defense and he roved as though he had the wanderlust.

AND the spirit of the man! Such charging, such surging, such relentless fighting energy. What an indomitable will! With him there never was a time to quit the fray or yield the field. The more dismal the outlook the fiercer flamed his courage. Germany put his heart and soul into football. It was his love, his life. With such physical qualifications for the game as he possessed and with such ambition coupled with the fighting heart of a Viking of old Schultz would have squeezed himself into any Hall of Football Fame.

BUCYRUS DEFEATED BY HARD FIGHTING MARION GRID TEAM

Monnett and Company Halted by Locals; Score in Last Quarter

BY KARL R McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

WITH one of the strongest teams in the North Central Ohio league out of the way, Coach Tobyer will start driving his Harding high gridders this week for what now develops as the 'crucial' contest of the season at Mansfield Saturday afternoon.

If a team ever fought its way to victory it was Harding Saturday afternoon when they defeated Monnett and his Bucyrus pigskin chasers, 12 to 7.

It was nothing else but fight, as several hundred Marion fans who saw the game can testify. Played under ideal conditions as could be wanted the Red and Black scored two touchdowns in the final period of play after local fans had given up all hope of winning.

Monnett Whole Team

As had been previously reported Monnett is the entire Bucyrus team. Stop him and the whole team was stopped. To sum up the count at Monnett was stopped in the last half after being permitted to run wild in the opening periods.

Yes, Harding got the breaks of the game. However, it was not a fumble that gave them victory. It was when Perry missed the try for point after Harding scored its first touchdown at the start of the fourth quarter.

It seemed to the writer that the fact that Harding was trailing one point just added more fight and determination to win the game. And so it happened. Just five minutes later the Red and Black pushed over another touchdown that won.

Breaks Even

As far as breaks are concerned they were about even both ways. Harding received a severe jolt in the second quarter when McAninch fumbled on the eight yard line after advancing the ball around left end 11 yards. Bucyrus recovered the fumble thus kept Harding from scoring.

With the score standing 7 to 0 Monnett fumbled on his own 30 yard line. Ansley recovered. Here Harding started the drive that put across the winning touchdown. Each team lost the ball one other time each during the game on fumbles.

In the first half Harding was outplayed 8 to 2 judging at the number of first downs made. In the last half Marion made six first downs to one for Bucyrus.

Monnett Does Scoring

A 40 yard end run by Monnett placed Bucyrus in position to score in the first quarter. With the ball 11 yards from the goal line Monnett covered the ground by carrying the ball on four straight plays.

Late in the third quarter Harding started for its first touchdown. Bucyrus was forced to punt after Monnett was thrown for an eight yard loss. Here McAninch Miley and Castner took charge of the ball and as the quarter ended had advanced it to the five yard line. The very first play in the fourth period Zimmer scored after receiving a lateral pass from McAninch. The line failed to hold and Perry's kick was blocked.

Marion then kicked to Bucyrus. After gaining two yards off right tackle, Monnett fumbled the ball on his own 30 yard line. Ansley recovering.

Start on Third Drive

A pass was tried but it fell short and incomplete. Wise gained one yard off right tackle when a pass McAninch to Castner, made first down.

Three plays through the line two by McAninch and one by Castner made another first down placing the ball within six yards of the goal line. Castner cut the distance down to two yards on two plays and McAninch put it across. The kick was again blocked by the fast charging Bucyrus line.

The balance of the game found Monnett driving his team in an effort to win. One forward pass made a first down. But the drive of the Bucyrus team was gone. The threat of Monnett was a thing of the past. Other passes were tried but it was a fighting Marion team that broke them up one after another. Bucyrus was forced to punt. Even this was a failure and Harding took the ball on its own 18 yard line. When the period ended Harding had started another drive down the field and the game ended with the ball on the Bucyrus 11 yard line.

If Harding puts up this kind of a game next Saturday at Mansfield, then the North Central League pennant will return to Marion. Shelby won it last year.

GEORGETOWN LEADS

New York Oct 28—With a grand total of 210 points Georgetown retains its lead today as the high scoring football team of the east. New York university which clashes with Georgetown next Saturday, is second with 170 points

ONLY THREE MAJOR TEAMS PLAY TRUE TO FORM AND WIN

Big Ten Title Narrows Down to Ohio, Illinois and Iowa

By DAVIS J WALSH

NEW YORK Oct 29—Eastern football devastated and laid waste by the great disaster of Saturday, was sadly identifying its dead and dying this morning after a football week end the like of which few sections have known even in these days of cordial results. Pelican Wood judged by comparative casualties was just a May pole dance by the girls at Bryn Mawr. Of 10 games generally designated as having major consequence only seven broke confidence with the experts and the results in two of the remaining three by no means were orthodox either.

Pennsylvania beaten by the Navy Dartmouth beaten by Harvard! Pitt well beaten by Gettysburg! New York university scoring 17 points on Colgate and Fordham 21 on W and J! I'd tell you more but I've run out of exclamation points.

Other Sections Quiet

Generally considered the day was one of extraordinary serenity in the other sections barring John Carroll's defeat of Davis Elkins and possibly Arkansas victory over Texas Aggies. I wouldn't care to say that Nebraska's decision over Missouri was one of those things nor that Iowa's one-point victory over Minnesota was two of them. The only surprises in connection with these events was that Nebraska could score as many as 24 points and that neither McLain nor Nagurski figured even negatively in the Iowa Minnesota result. The Gophers much after their manner against Michigan several years ago won on the competitions in yardage and first downs but lost the ball game on the score board.

In consequence the Big Ten title race has narrowed its scope considerably with Iowa, Illinois and Ohio State, undefeated to date running, jowl and jowl. Wisconsin hasn't blown one either but its tie with Purdue is doing it no good almost constantly.

11 Undefeated Teams

Among the remaining teams undefeated are the Army Nebraska Southern California, Georgia Tech Florida Vanderbilt Carnegie Tech New York university, Georgetown Boston college Kansas Princeton Tennessee California and Stanford. I'm throwing out the Bears defeat by the Olympic club on Saturday, a precedent which naturally absolves Stanford too California and Southern California have their scoreless tie of course. The records of Princeton and Kansas are not uncontaminated in this respect, either.

Teams that were undefeated on Saturday morning but no longer enjoying this distinction are Yale Cornell Dartmouth Pennsylvania Lafayette Bucknell Minnesota Missouri and Davis Elkins. The number of eastern victims is a characteristic commentary on the day. And in most cases the defeated team didn't deserve any more than it got which was approximately nothing. In this category falls Pennsylvania's defeat by West Virginia. Bucknell on the other hand had a 12 to 0 lead over Gettysburg, going into the final period but blew it. Cornell slightly outplayed Princeton but old doctor fumblefinger the all America drawback wouldn't have it that way. As for Yale, it outgained 10 Army men but was beaten by the eleventh Chris Cagle.

Army Ahead of Field

The returns from the day left the Army slightly ahead of its field since Carnegie Tech New York university Georgetown and Boston College do not play schedules that can be reckoned comparable with that of the soldiers and Princeton still must laugh off its tie with Virginia. They'll need Victor Hugo to help them with that one.

Nothing really untoward happened in the middle west unless you are a Chicago man. Purdue's 40 to 0 victory one of the first in Stagg's book of memoirs merely added to the season's debut. The victories of Wisconsin Illinois and Ohio State over Michigan Northwestern and Indiana respectively were conventional more or less. So were all the returns from the coast. Nor was there anything astonishing from the south unless you are surprised to discover that the breaks being equal the good teams generally win.

WINS FIRST

Hiram Cops Game After Five Years of Playing

AND so today Hiram is celebrating its first football victory in five years, thanks to Otterbein. The score Hiram 8 Otterbein 7.

Another Saturday score that takes the dope went into the records when University of Cincinnati played Wittenberg off its feet and held the Lutherans to a 6-0 score.

Muskingum evened old scores at Akron with an 15-0 victory. Defiance playing its first Northwestern conference game swamped Toledo 15 0. John Carroll sent Davis Elkins back to West Virginia at the short end of a 2 0 score.

FRIEDMAN WINS

Detroit Pro Gridders Undefeated After Beating Bears

Chicago Oct 29—Benny Friedman's Detroit pro football team was still unbeaten today by virtue of Benny's own prowess on a windswept gridiron here yesterday.

Paddy Driscoll's Chicago Bears furnished the opposition which was good enough to satisfy even the devastating Friedman. The latter was the magnet that drew more than 10 000 cash customers to the game.

Detroit won 6 to 0 in the last quarter when Friedman carried the ball 3 yards on four attempts and placed it on the one yard line from where Jackson carried it over.

MT. GILEAD EAGLES FALL BEFORE DRIVE OF LOCALS, 7 TO 6

Missed Kick in Final Period Gives A. C. Eleven Victory

AFTER three starts this season in which they lost two games and tied the other, Marion's professional gridders Sunday afternoon at the fairgrounds finally won a football game when they defeated the Mt Gilead Eagle eleven, 7 to 6.

It was Marion's ball game throughout with Mt Gilead never threatening the local goal line. Twice the locals were within 10 yards of a touchdown but the Mt Gilead line stiffened and they were held back.

Marion scored early in the first quarter when a punt was blocked on Mt. Gilead's 10 yard line. Lashey scored and Irvin drop kicked the try for point.

The only sensational feature of the game occurred when Cash recovered Lashey's fumble and ran 80 yards for a touchdown in the final period.

That was the only time the Morrow county eleven showed any form at all. The rest of the game was one-sided as far as Marion was concerned and the locals might just as well have run three touchdowns as one. Mt Gilead chalked up but one first down during the entire game.

Next Sunday a Springfield team will be brought here.

OILS AND COPPERS MEET OPPOSITION

Progress in Earlier Hours Halted: Railroad Stocks Firm

MONEY MARKET TIGHT

Enormous Holiday Trade Seen in Strength of Mercantile Stocks

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

New York, Oct. 29—Irregularity in the stock market today had its origin principally in the heavy calling of loans by the banks in the month-end settlements, the continuation of the eight per cent call loan rate and the predecession profit taking in a number of the speculative favorites. The oils, coppers and mercantile stocks forged ahead aggressively in the forenoon but encountered considerable opposition as day advanced. Railroad stocks were firm, with a number of the so-called merger rails up a point or two.

Tightness in the money market was not surprising in view of the heavy volume of November financing to be completed at the banking institutions. Recent expansion of bank credit in financing the stock market has drained the sources from which new supplies might normally be expected at this time, but the bankers were understood to have agreed on 8 per cent as the maximum rate for the period, having their fingers on new credit sources if needed.

The enthusiastic reports from industry and business confirmed what has already been submitted by representative motor car, copper steel and manufacturing concerns generally. Further response to the expectation of an enormous holiday trade was seen in the early strength and activity of the mercantile stocks, including Macy, Woolworth, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. In anticipation a favorable third quarterly earnings statement to be submitted tomorrow, U. S. Steel common rose about two points before encountering any great volume of selling.

Cotton

New York, Oct. 29—Cotton opened today at advances of 16 to 22 points. December sold at 19.55c; January 19.52c; March 19.47c; May 19.42c; and July 19.25c.

U. S. Bonds

New York, Oct. 29—Opening Liberty bond quotations: 3½s 98.25; first 4¼s 1.01; fourth 4¼s 1.01; fourth 4¼s 101.3 and treas. 4¼s 106.24.

ILLNESS FATAL TO CALEDONIA WOMAN

Mrs. L. C. Donnenwirth Succumbs at Home; Funeral Tuesday

Caledonia, Oct. 29—Funeral services for Mrs. Helena Donnenwirth, wife of L. C. Donnenwirth, will be held at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home. The Rev. F. W. Hass, Danville, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. F. S. Fancher, of this place. Interment will be made in the Caledonia cemetery.

Mrs. Donnenwirth died at 9:15 o'clock Saturday night, at her home here, of infirmities of age. She was born Aug. 28, 1853, at New Washington, the daughter of Christian and Barbara Guiss. Her marriage to Mr. Donnenwirth was solemnized May 1, 1873. Mrs. Donnenwirth had resided here for 35 years. She was a member of the Memorial M. E. church, Pythian Sisters temple and of the W. C. T. U.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR LA RUE RALLY

Will Renew County Campaign with Meeting Tuesday Night

The local Democratic organization will renew its campaign in the surrounding communities Tuesday night with a political rally at LaRue. The meeting is to be held in the Knights Pythias hall and will be preceded by a band concert.

George S. Myers, candidate for lieutenant governor, will address the meeting. Fred E. Guthery, Marion attorney, will preside at the meeting and will also speak.

D. C. Throckmorton, of Columbus, addressed Democrats of Caledonia and vicinity at a well attended meeting last Saturday night. J. W. Jacoby, county chairman, who presided at the meeting also shared the program as a speaker.

Among this year's "freshers" at one of the prominent English colleges for women is Princess Noy of Chandaburn a niece of the King of Siam, who is studying for a degree in history.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Oct. 29—This bids fair to be a bull week in the grain markets.

The sharp advance of wheat on Saturday shook the confidence of bears in the advantages of the short side. For a time they may be slower to take liberties with the market when it stands still.

Wheat may go considerably higher, but the situation remains so bearish statistically that the average trader probably should be extremely careful following it up. He might get caught at the top, or he might find himself dumped out on small dips as has repeatedly happened to the bull for weeks past.

But no matter how the situation looks, wheat seems to me still to be a dangerous sale until after the election is over. Whether it will be a purchase or a sale then remains to be seen. That may depend on a good many things, not least of which will be the attitude of the new administration toward farm relief.

Already it seems likely that if Hoover is elected a special session of Congress will be called, if the regular session next Winter does nothing for agriculture. Hoover should be elected, therefore, with this prospect ahead, wheat might be in a bull position after election day even though it had a good advance between now and then.

The market has been steadily fought by bears, but they have got nowhere. They seem to be selling at this time because of increasing receipts and weakening cash prices. These are both poor reasons.

There is an enormous waiting demand for corn. Until that is filled up big receipts and the decline of cash premiums toward the level of the December future mean nothing bearish. During that time there can be no accumulation of cash corn.

It was pointed out here yesterday that the premium of 17 cents at which Argentine December corn is selling over our December future seems to have been ignored, although old-time board of trade men say it is unprecedented.

DECREASE SHOWN

Bank clearings here Saturday were reported at $87,182.20 by clearing headquarters in the Marion National bank today. This total is more than $7,000 lower than the figure for a week ago Saturday when clearings were recorded at $94,896.18.

Coffee Market
